The German war office in Berlia in its official statement declares that the battles in northern Poland "are taking their normal course." In southern Poland, it is asserted, the Russian attack has been repulsed.

"The eastern army," it says, "has taken 80,000 unwounded Russian prisoners in the battles between Nov. 11 and Dec. 1."

The battles in question include those at Wloclawek, Kutno, Lodz and Lowicz.

"Statements of the foreign press," says the war office, "that the 23,000 prisoners we reported as taken by us ding breakfast was served. The honat Kutno were included in the 40,000 previously reported are untrue." The Russians have driven back the Germans along the Vistula and now hold Plock in force. This information reached Petrograd in unofficial dispatches from the front telling of the terrific fighting in Po-

The bloodiest day of the fighting in Poland to date is said to have been last Friday. Throughout that day the Siberian corps stormed the German trenches in the Lodz region. The Russians charged and carried the fighting directly to the German lines.

The enemy offered terrific resistance. Ammunition was cast aside and the two forces fought bayonet to bayonet, or clubbed each other with the butts of their rifles. Many resorted to bare fists before giving up. Not a single German was left alive when the Russians finally came into undisputed during temporary embarrassment. The possession of the works.
