audience except a few night watchmen and the statue of QUAY, read until he was hoarse. But as in everything else he did his duty well.

The veto of the Election bills brought out equally well-defined differences of opinion. Most of the employees on "the hill" were disappointed and though they refrained from an expression of their feeling they literally exuded dispair. Divorce of the Governor from the machine was the general interpretation among them and that would logically mean "house-cleaning." Nobody ventured the suggestion that the Governor contemplates a non-partisan administration or an invitation to Democrats to gather about the official banquet board. BRUMBAUGH is a Republican of the strictest type and except where laws or decency require it will appoint only Republicans. But they may be of a new breed.

On the other hand the independents of both parties drew hope and encouragement from this preliminary step in divorce proceedings. The Governor, it may be said confidently, has taken an accurate measure of ROOSEVELT and his followers in this State and they will have nothing to gain from the break if one comes. But the type of Republican which BRUMBAUGH is likely to call into service will mean a vast improvement, alike in efficiency and personnel, and a change in methods and morals in public life. These changes may interfere with ambitions and prevent promotions, but they will make for the conservation of the interests of the people and contribute to prosperity.

At a session of the Board of Pardons held yesterday some of the abuses which have crept into that 'service were exposed and rebuked. Suspicion has been current for some time that lawyers have been "drumming up business" before the Pardon Board after the methods employed by "ambulance-chasers." At the meeting yesterday when one Chester county lawyer appeared for six different clients from six different counties, the suspicions were strengthened. The Lieutenant Govenor McClain, President of the Board, protested. "How does it come," asked the Lieutenant Governor, "that you have so many cases from so many widely separated counties?" The answer was neither candid nor satisfactory.

Mrs. Helen Doyle who participated with her husband in the kidnapping of WILLIE WHITLA, at Sharon, six years ago was refused a pardon after a careful hearing. Her attorney, a Pittsburgh lawyer, made out a strong case. She was young when the crime was committed and under evil influences, he declared, and is now "deeply penitent." She has served six years in prison, he added, "and to keep her in prison nineteen years longer would be a shameful revenge." But a letter from the District Attorney of Mercer county, who convicted her, stating that she intends to "re-enact her crime for the movies" settled the matter. The Board of Pardons doesn't favor that way of encouraging crime.
