The Home of My Heart.

By MARTHA ALRICKS JOHNSON.

The home of my boyhood, the cot I was born in. Ah! Well I remember that dear humble spot. E'en though now in ruin it rises before me, A peaceful old picture in memory's fond lot. Many years have gone by since I left it to wander In far distant countries, across the white foam. Reminiscent I sigh for life's dewy morning In the shadowy past, and my dearly loved home. Contented and happy I roamed o'er the fields A bare headed urchin, fleet footed I flew; No thought of the morrow e'er troubled or vexed me; Hearts around me were tender, and loving and true. Alas! They have gone to their heavenly rest, Those dear ones—the hearts I loved best; But to me there's a joy that I hold in store A hope that we'll meet in the blest evermore.

LOOKING WEST ON HIGH STREET FROM WATER STREET.

It will be noticed that the pennant ropes from column to column, parallel with the street had not been hung when this picture was taken. Between all pennants on street decorations are incandescent lights which will make a veritable canopy of lights over the streets at night.
