BOOKS, MAGAZINES, Etc.

THOSE PICKLEWEIGHTS—Who has not chuckled over the unending complications in the household of the Pickleweights—Enoch, the plaintive; Maria, the masterful; Ichabod, the Injun strategist; Dill the roving and voracious, and Helen Battleax, gallant defender of her brother's innocence and helplessness?

For years the tribulations of this interesting family have delighted readers of the Philadelphia North American, and the characters created by Cartoonist Bradford have become familiar to thousands. In fact the Pickleweights have grown to be such an institution that more space and special treatment are required to chronicle their explosive history.

Last Sunday, July 11th, therefore, they made their appearance in the Sunday North American occupying a full page, in color. Henceforth, it is understood, these Pickleweights to fame as "The Peaceful Pickleweights." Bradford announces that they have moved to the country, in the hope that tranquil scenes, far removed from the turmoil of the city, will allay the hostilities that have divided them. The first page in the series shows them installed in their new home. Unfortunately, the occasion is marred by some deplorable accidents; but it is the universal hope that the family has entered upon a career of peace.

This is only one feature of the North American's new comic section, which, it is declared, will be the best in the country. With the Pickleweights will appear each Sunday the original Katzenjammer Kids, whose antics have convulsed uncounted readers; "Just Boys," a page of homely humor that will delight everyone who has known childhood, and a fourth page, on the most indulgent of young parents and "Their Only Child."

This new comic section will add immensely to the fascination of the Sunday North American, and should prove a source of never-ending delight to all who enjoy rollicking fun. Order from your news-dealer today.
