The showers are so frequent and hard that the wheat don't get a chance to dry sufficient to haul into the barn and there is grave danger of it starting to grow in the shock. Then the oats is ready to cut but the crop is so heavy that the hard rains have knocked down big patches of it, so that it will be hard to cut. -Tomorrow, July 31st, will mark the close of the trout fishing season in Pennsylvania and it did not prove to be over-fruitful with results in this section. The season opened with low streams and unusually clear water and when rain did come there was so much of it that the streams have been too high and most of the time quite cloudy ever since. At that a number of nice catches were made at Burnham Saturday, after a visit of three weeks by fishermen who were persistent enough to spend lots of time on the good trout streams. And the trout that weren't caught will be there to help out the stock next year. And now that the trout season their home in Ensley, Ala., and are visiting with is about over, and the thoroughbred sportsman begins to pack away his rod and line until next season rolls around, there is a strong probability that he will look up his hunting paraphernalia, as the very fact that County Treasurer John D. Miller has received his hunters' licenses volunteered and twenty counties in the works smoke stack was built by Lew shows that the hunting season will be here before we realize it.
