PHILADELPHIA EVENING LEDGER CELEBRATES ITS FIRST BIRTHDAY.— Our contemporary, the Evening Ledger of Philadelphia, will be one year BELLEFONTE, 59-4-tf

With the Churches of the old the 14th. Its career has been unusually successful. Starting in a field where its competitors right to expect in three. Today its circulation is well up into six figures, and still the word is Forward, March. To celebrate its birthday, the Evening Ledger will issue a big Special Anniversary Number, the chief feature of which will be a four-page Intaglio section, containing full-page photographs of the candidates in the Philadelphia mayoralty campaign, and also fine pictures illustrating our naval preparedness and the progress of the Wom-The St. John's Lutheran Sunday school an's Suffrage Movement. The Intaglio section Evening Ledger's Anniversary Number promises to be a unique newspaper.

The North American is going to make a new departure in picture supplements by issuing with its edition of September 19th a wonderfully artistic photogravure print entitled "Family Cares." This is a picture which will appeal to every lover of children and every one who is interested in child life. It represents a little girl clad in her nightie going downstairs with a sick pet. The expression on the child's face shows the real trouble with which her soul is burdened. It is the work of a master artist, and will find instant favor with North American readers.

The North American picture policy, which will be followed for several weeks to come, is based upon the idea that a picture worth preservation should be issued in such form as will allow it to be preserved. The print of "Family Cares" is on handsome heavy paper. It is done in the best style of the photogravure art and is ready for framing. It is worthy of a place on the wall of any home.
