Army Physical Test.

The recommendations of the general staff officers that have been considering the proposal to abolish the 90-mile annual test ride now are before the chief of staff awaiting his action. It is recommended that the annual ride be discontinued and that officers, instead, be required to make a 20-mile horesback ride or a walk in one day every month. The proposed 10-mile walk for army officers is similar to that now exacted of officers of the navy and marine corps. Those advocating the change in the army believe that the proposed new requirements will condition in that the exercise is distributed through the year, instead of being concentrated in a single supreme annual effort to keep up with the pace. The annual physical examination will be retained as a means of disclosing the physically incapacitated.

The Noble Guards of Italy.

The noble guards, who have lost their commander, Prince Camillo Rospigliosi, were drawn exclusively from the Roman aristocracy until about two years ago, when Pius X sanctioned the acceptance of recruits from any country, provided they were Catholics and could show the necessary number of quarterings. Their uniform-black tunic with gold epaulets. dark blue trousers and a gold crested helmet-forms a striking contrast to the medieval attire of the Swiss guards, of which the most no ticeable features are the enormous breeches and striped stockings. Noble guards and Palatine guards, who are a sort of papal militia, furnish a daily picket for the antechamber of the pope. For other police duties there are the papal carabinieri, whom the stranger resets at every corner of the Vatican. Altogether the papal army numbers about 600 men.

Bird Cages the Newport Fad. The appearance at Newport of young women carrying small wicker bird cages is getting to be a daily occurrence. The desire to do something "different" has perhaps as much as anything else to do with the promotion of the latest fad, but whatever the basis may be, the public appearance of Miss Society and her favorite song bird is getting to be almost a part of the daily routine. So, if you happen to see a tastefully gowned young woman strolling along with a bird cage dangling from the fingers of her right hand-which is the proper way to carry the cagedon't go away with the idea that the family is moving and they won't trust the songster to the man on the van, or that she contemplates a long journey and has no one at home to feed the pet. No, it's only Newport's latest fad.

Ronan could wait no longer. With lantern hooked under his arm he dropped into the hole, and then placing his face close to the fissure which the lifting beam had opened called aloud.

After that nothing was clear—a great upheaval, the disappearance of Ronan, his sudden reappearance, dragging by superhuman effort a form as heavy as his own, his cries for help, a surging knot of figures and then a slim ambulance surgeon worming to the centre of things with flashing deftness. Flint's driver, Tom, had only one impression. Ronan had said something to his deputy, who had nodded faintly and smiled.

And outside a woman waited serene. And her boy was still sleeping in her As they bore John Flint out to the
