MINE RESCUE CAR AT STATE COLLEGE.—Mine rescue car No. 1, of the United States Bureau of Mines, in charge of foreman miner Jesse Henson, and a crew of trained men, arrived at State College, on November 22nd, on its itinerary through Pennsylvania. The car will be on exhibition every day from 9.00 a. m. to 5.00 p. m. until December 4th, and free lectures will be given to miners on safe methods of mining, the use of safety lamps and rescue apparatus, and mine gases. On December 6th, the car will go to Antrim, Penna., to remain until December 18th.

This mine rescue car is one of eight now in use by the Bureau of Mines for training miners in first aid and rescue methods and the use of oxygen breathing apparatus. Each car has a crew that includes two experienced miners, a mining engineer in charge and a mine surgeon, and is equipped with the latest rescue and first-aid apparatus and supplies. At a moment's notice the car is ready to proceed to the scene of a mine disaster, where the bureau men place themselves under the direction of the state mining inspectors and mine officials to do everything possible to assist or save miners who may have been injured or entombed.

Each car carries oxygen breathing apparatus, a supply of oxygen in cylinders, safety lamps, a field telephone with 2,000 feet of wire, a collapsible steel mine cage, an apparatus for reviving miners who have been gassed, and the charts, splints, and bandages for demonstrating first-aid methods. Some of the training with rescue apparatus will be inside the mines, also in smoke or fumes, so that wearers will understand the value of the apparatus and how to use it. A miner wearing the apparatus can enter a mine immediately after an explosion, and work in smoke and black damp for two hours.

RUSH TOWNSHIP OVERSEERS THE LOSERS.—In court at Ebensburg last Thursday Judge Stephens handed down a decision in the case of the poor overseers of Rush township, Centre county, against Cambria county in which he awarded the overseers $37.75 on a claim of $423.96.

Several years ago the Rush township overseers brought suit against the poor board of Cambria county, claiming the sum of $423.96. The Centre county folks declared that the support of William Peters, an indigent Cambria countian, had cost them the sum named and that it should be paid by the poor directorate of that county. The latter, through its attorney, Charles S. Evans, held that the proper place for the maintenance of William Peters was in his own county and it opposed the payment to Rush township. Judge Stephens in his opinion holds that $37.75 settles the bill of the Centre county poor authorities. It is very probable that the amount allowed the Rush township overseers will not pay their attorneys' fees.

FOUND DEAD IN CHAIR.—Ephraim Fisher, a man who lived alone in a small house on top of the Sugar valley mountain in Clinton county, was found dead sitting in a chair on Friday evening by John Cooper and Asher Welshans, his nearest neighbors. The men had not seen anything of Fisher since the Tuesday previous and becoming suspicious went to his home to investigate, finding him sitting in the chair cold in death. Fisher was past sixty years of age and had moved to his home on the mountain from Howard township last summer, and very little is known regarding his life. The authorities removed the body to his old home near Howard where the funeral was held on Sunday.

A MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR.—A weird tale comes by way of the Tyrone Herald of a mysterious shooting affair in Ferguson township, last Thursday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mowry, Mrs. Mowry's father, James Miller and Paul Long, while motoring back to their home in Tyrone from a trip to State College, were shot at by two unknown men. It is alleged that several shots struck a comb on Mrs. Mowry's head, breaking it in pieces and that several other shots penetrated Miller's back and one Long's right hand. On Wednesday the Herald published another story detailing the arrest of a Ferguson township man who admitted he did the shooting just for fun. Bellefonte authorities aver that there is very little foundation for the story and deny all knowledge of any arrest being made. At least nobody has been brought to the Centre county jail on such a charge.

CELEBRATED SIXTY-EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY.—Col. Emanuel Noll, the very courteous baggage master at the Pennsylvania railroad depot in this place, was sixty-eight years old on Monday and celebrated the event by entertaining a few of his friends with a chicken and waffle supper at his comfortable home on north Allegheny street. In fact the affair was planned as a surprise for him by his daughter, Miss Rebekah Noll, but the Colonel was wise to what was happening, even if he did keep one eye shut. The guests included the following "young" men: Monroe Armor, Henry Taylor, Amos Garbrick, Hammon Sechler, Robert Sechler, Henry Walkey and the writer, and just to prove their youngness they compared ages and the total years for the eight gentlemen, which included Mr. Noll, is 562, or an average of 70 years and 3 months.

Of course it would not be polite to tell who was the oldest or who the youngest man present, but from the way every one of them did justice to Miss Noll's delicious supper it would seem as if all of them were young. Following the sumptuous repast an hour or two were spent in swapping yarns of bygone days and in leaving everyone most heartily wished Col. Noll many more similar anniversaries.

Compensation Rule for Civil Divisions. They Need Not Insure Their Liability—Important Decision by Board.

HARRISBURG PA., Nov. 22.—Civil divisions within Pennsylvania that have the right to levy and collect taxes were exempted today by the Workmen's Compensation Board from the necessity of insuring their compensation liability. This ruling will relieve county, city, borough, school and township authorities of much red tape.

Under this plan, when an employee of a civil division is injured, the compensation is to be paid out of the city, borough or school treasury, as the case may be. This leaves the division to carry its own insurance. Thus a policeman, who is injured in the course of duty, will be paid out of the city treasury, and a school janitor will be paid out of the school treasury.

Another rule adopted today provides that all confidential business brought before the board will be kept secret under all conditions. Any information given by persons applying for exemptions from insuring will be considered as strictly confidential. This will make it possible for corporations to give secret information without the danger of its being used against them for purposes of taxation.

Companies Get Another Month's Delay in Enforcement of Order. Renewed activity in the region to the south of Riga is reported in the Russian official statement issued by the war office in Petrograd.

It is apparent from the statement that the Russians have begun a campaign to wear down the Germans operating on this front, the invaders losing ground in the fighting referred to.

HILLSTROM SHOT IN UTAH PRISON

The Man President Wilson Twice Appealed for Pays Penalty for Murder.

Joseph Hillstrom, condemned murderer, whose case attracted attention throughout the country and prompted the intercession of President Wilson, the minister to the United States from Sweden and the American Federation of Labor, was put to death by a firing squad in the state prison, at Salt Lake City.

Hillstrom was convicted of the murder of John G. Morrison, a grocer, and his son, Arling, January 10, 1914. Under the law, he was allowed to choose between shooting and hanging. He was the nineteenth person to pay the death penalty in Utah and the fifteenth to choose shooting instead of hanging.

President Wilson twice appealed for further respite for Hillstrom. The president's second request, made Thursday, was denied by Governor Spry as not based on any new facts.

Although self-possessed, when he faced his executioners, Hillstrom had a sensational nervous collapse just previously. He tied the door of his cell with strips torn from his blankets, and fought the guards fiercely with the handle of a broom he had snatched from an attendant in the corridor. The outburst was unexpected.

He arose and began to shake the cell door, shrieking as if in a nightmare. The noise reached the outside guards who turned in a general alarm. The prison physician tried with slight success to quiet the man. It was decided not to interfere with him until necessary and he was not disturbed until the time to take him to the scene of execution.

When the guards arrived for this purpose Hillstrom attacked them savagely with the broomhandle, which he had broken in two, leaving a sharp point on one piece.

The deputy warden, A. C. Ure, received a slight wound in the arm from Hillstrom's weapon. Hillstrom fought silently until Sheriff Corless arrived and appealed to him.

"Joe, this is all nonsense," said Corless. "What do you mean? You promised to die like a man." Hillstrom hesitated a moment and then yielded. "Well, I'm through," he said. "But you can't blame a man for fighting for his life."

The firing squad consisted of five men, who were paid $40 each for the work. They selected their rifles by lot, one of the weapons containing a blank cartridge.

The chair for Hillstrom was placed against the inner wall of the prison facing a barricade to conceal the firing squad from the condemned man and the spectators. After he was seated attendants asked if he had anything to say. He said:

"Gentlemen, I die with a clear conscience. I never did anything wrong in my life. I die fighting, not like a coward. Well, I'm going, good-by."

Hillstrom staggered to the chair and fell dropped as he was strapped in. Hillstrom's collapse was attributed to an opiate administered after he had offered resistance in his cell.

The prison physician placed a paper target directly over Hillstrom's heart to guide the members of the firing squad.

When the officer started to give the command to fire Hillstrom yelled: "Let her go!" The squad fired, and four bullets pierced his heart.

Hatching Copperheads

Orvis Walker, of Rebersburg, Centre county, Pa., has been so successful as a breeder of black Minorca chickens that he is trying his hand at snake hatching.

Wednesday he uncovered five dozen snake eggs under a rock along the new State road he is helping to build. He collected the whole nest and carried it home in his pocket.

Walker put the eggs in a fruit jar and "set" his improvised incubator in the warm rays of the sun. He expects to wait thirty days for the hatch to come out, and says if he has good luck there will be about a quart of little copperheads in the jar.

Arrest Father of Girl Captive.

Maryland Man Charged With Assault With Intent to Murder for Imprisoning Girl Eleven Years.

Frank Marshall, the St. Michael's farmer, who is accused of imprisoning his daughter, Grace, twenty-eight years old, in an attic room at his farmhouse for eleven years to break up a school girl romance, was held without bail by Justice of the Peace Tharp, in Easton, Md., for a further hearing.

Marshall was arrested at the home of a brother, W. O. Marshall, near Kirrkham, about six miles from Easton. Sheriff Stephens and a half dozen constables had been searching for him. Marshall left his farm house after telephoning a challenge to the sheriff to come and get him. He threatened to shoot any one who came on the farm to serve a warrant.

Marshall accompanied the sheriff without a word. He first was taken in a motor car to the farm house, where he spoke to his wife, Rose, a few minutes. "You had better wait for some money," she said to him as he stepped in the corridor.

"I don't need any to get out of this," replied the farmer. A large crowd awaited the arrival of the machine, but there was no demonstration as the prisoner walked into the justice's office, and a minute later was escorted across the street to the Talbot county jail. Marshall, who is charged with assault with intent to murder, may not be given his further hearing for a week.

While Marshall was arraigned before Justice Tharp, a warrant was issued by Justice Dodson, of St. Michaels, for the arrest of his wife, the stepmother of Grace, on the charge of assault. The complaint was made by Miss Emma L. Davies, agent of the Children's Aid society. Tharp earlier has issued a writ for Mrs. Marshall, but, after conferring with lawyers, refused to permit it to be served. He declared the wife could not be arrested as a co-principal with her husband.

Grace Marshall, ignorant of the outburst of indignation spreading throughout the Eastern Shore because of her imprisonment, is lying at the home of Mrs. M. H. James, an aunt, and is responding rapidly to nursing. Marshall denied he had imprisoned the girl to break up a school girl romance. At the same time, residents recall that her sweetheart was John Yewall, a farmhand, twice her age, who died five years ago. Yewall's death was said to be hastened by an impression that the girl was dead.

The Marshalls, the authorities say, announced about that time that their daughter was dead. They say they gave out this news when another daughter, much younger, died of diphtheria. Scirrful chums of Grace Marshall were fooled by the assertion, it is declared, and a group of her classmates sent flowers for the funeral.

The farmer, who is fifty years old, and is a tenant on the farm of former State Senator Richard S. Dodson, a Democratic power in Talbot county, declared that he did not pen up the girl on account of the romance, but because she was insane. This statement, however, is contradicted by Senator Dodson, who recalled that about eleven years ago Marshall went to his home and said he intended "to shoot a man bothering his daughter."

"It's all a lie about me treating my daughter brutally," shouted Marshall. "She is crazy and we kept her at the farm to give her kind treatment. We could not bear to have her taken to a hospital, where she would be away from us." Mrs. Marshall said she personally attended Grace daily.
