Americans may debate the methods of preparedness, but the time is past for questioning the need of an adequate naval and military force for national defense. But there is an excuse for those who assume with Bryan a cocksure attitude of superiority of plain teaching of the European war. The belief that America cannot be invaded is now an exploded idea. The belief that all the world powers love us too dearly to harm us may find acceptance among those persons who still fancy that the earth is flat, but not among intelligent thinking

It is a rare thing to hear farmers as a rule complain of being dissatisfied with present conditions in their occupation. Occasionally you hear some crank lament on account of farming, as they put it, being a losing game. The men who allege that there is no money in farming, are not farmers but pretenders. We have an illustration that carries out our contention. In close proximity to Pleasant Gap, some eight years ago a young farmer who had been farming for some time on a rented farm concluded he would buy a farm, with a view of bettering his condition financially. Although he possessed only $2,000, and bought a fine farm for $8,000, today he is the owner of a model farm without any incumbrance. He don't owe one dollar to any man. Of course he is an exceptionally industrious man, which always counts. He is also the happy possessor of an automobile. Farming pays.

As an evidence of the growth, progress and advancement of Pleasant Gap, we have the satisfaction of announcing that game that it has advantages over almost any other, both in point of moral and intellectual culture. In order to be a good shot with a cue a man must be able to calculate distance and angles correctly. The player must decide as to what he intends to do, and then go about doing it with mathematical exactness. The game is often spoken of as practical geometry, and is accredited with all the advantages and benefits of that branch of study. The player must reason correctly and perform the operation with the greatest precision. Her call, "Any catfish? Any catfish?" has rung through the streets of the city for nearly half a century. Residents of the northeast say they cannot remember when she did not cry her wares night and day. Many remember it mingled with their childish dreams, the shrill, piercing, long-drawn-out wail bringing a picture of a little woman, who always had seemed old, walking swiftly along back streets and alleys with a tray balanced on her head. To the children she was "Jennie Catfish." which was their translation of her cry. To her neighbors she was Mrs. Amelia Wilson, eighty years old. She had been ill for some time and had been taken care of by a neighbor, who the other day entered her home with a postal from a niece. She found the old woman dead as the result of
