Not many will receive advice contrary to their wishes, and it is therefore generally useless to give it.

If some men were as stubborn about going ahead as they are about backing up, they might get somewhere. When a woman turns from men to

The management of the Whiterock quarries made stringent efforts to secure one hundred and fifty men over and above what they now employ, but succeeded in getting only about fifteen up to this time. Pastor McKetchnie, of the M. E. congregation here, has been afflicted with the grip for the past few weeks. Being a man of unusual vitality and pluck, he never surrendered, but faithfully attended to his official duties, and is, we are glad to announce, on a fair way of recovery, which fact is a great source of relief to his many friends here.

Pleasant Gap has been fairly well supplied with commodities essential to home comforts, but we were never blessed with a newspaper published in our vil-lage until a few days ago, when merchant Stitzer issued volume one, No. 1.
The new paper is entitled "Stitzer's Store Paper." The production displays considerable talent, and is to be issued monthly. It will be absolutely free to the patrons of Mr. Stitzer's store.

It is apparent that these are days of great strain upon the retired warrior of Oyster Bay. His voice indicates it. Mr. Roosevelt's ammunition seems to be running low. If he loses the battle at Chicago, he must wait four long years before he can make another attack. And, with two defeats, what will he have left to prosecute his fight in 1920. It is evident that this is the Colonel's last opportunity. And the desperate effort he is making to get a hearing indicates that nobody knows it better than he does.

The statesmen who congregate about our stores in the evenings, are now busily engaged in nominating candidates for President. Between whittling the benches and lounging around on the heads of the head incidentally support that the province of the head incidentally support that the support that t cracker barrels and incidentally swiping an odd cracker, the display of political intelligence usually occupies their precious time up to near midnight. A few nights ago the topic for debate was on the eligibility of a second term for the Presidency, and the contest was decided a draw. We are all entitled to our private opinions on such live issues, as there don't seem to be any good reason why a President of the United States should not be eligible to a second four-year term. A six or an eight-year term might reasonably be limited, at least so that a President should not succeed himself. There is good reason for opposing the attempt to break down the tradition which has established two terms as the limit of power for any one President. But the second term has come to be looked upon as the party's recognized means of expressing it's approval of the President who has become it's leader. Lincoln, Grant, Cleveland, Harrison and McKinley were honored by election to a second term, and Roosevelt publicly accepted his one election as constituting a second

The custom practically amounts to a single eight-year term, with the right of recall at the end of four years. And the effort to inject the single-term plank of the last Democratic convention into the discussion of Mr. Wilson's eligibility is futile. If it is attempted by Democrats it will be taken for what it is, simply an attempt to advance the personal interests of Bryan or of Champ Clark. The discussion of the question outside the Democratic party is even more plainly a political move without any basis in principle. The Democratic party at last has a chance to shake off the incubus of Bryanism. And, in any case, it cannot afford to swap horses in the middle of the stream. If it is going to have a future of any power and influence upon the country, it must go forward under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson.

Historic Rose Tree.

The most venerable rose tree in existence is said to bloom against the ancient church of Hildesheim, in Germany. Notwithstanding the many parties which at different times have been in the ascendarcy, they all seem to have respected and tended the rose tree, which, it is said, was planted by Charlemagne. The trunk is now almost as big as a man's body. There are five principal limbs trained against the church, the tree being protected by iron railings inclosing an area of about twenty-six square feet. The German soldiers in early ages tended the tree; Catholics and Protestants, in turn masters of the town, drained the ground; the soldiers of Turenne fastened up the branches with clamps, and those of Napoleon, a century and a half later, erected the railings.

For the Visitors.

In full view of the crowd in a very busy street two vendors of berries were busy with piles of thin wooden boxes, each scantily filled with immature fruit. Emptying box after box. the vendors deftly punched up one layer of the box bottom to a sharp angle pointed in the middle, propped it there with paper and then refilled the receptacle, taking great care that the finest and freshest looking berries should make a showy top covering.

One of the spectators grew indignant. "How in the world," he demanded, "do you expect to sell your wares when you openly show that they are not what they seem to be?"

"Aw, gwan!" said the vendor addressed. "This is New York, and there are more trains coming with more people."-Everybody's.

Cross Eyed Mentally.

Do you ever start to say something and find yourself using the word you hadn't the faintest idea of using? Just a little cross eyed mentally, aren't you? Did you ever mean to jam your foot on the accelerator and slam it down on the brake instead? Have you ever put salt twice on the same plateful of food when one of the applications should have been pepper? Did you ever laugh at the wrong time at the theater, or sneeze unnecessarily at a funeral, or fall to sleep quietly in church, or solicitously inquire where So-and-so is nowadays when the poor chap has been dead six months? Sure you have. Everybody does it. We're all just a bit mentally cross eyed sometimes, and we don't look where it seems that we are looking. What we really need to look out for is not doing queer things too often. If we do there's no telling what may happen to us. We may get into the papers!-Springfield Union.

Men Who Wear Feathers.

Among the strange tribes of men about whom little is known are the Chamacocos of the region about the upper Paraguay river. Although the Chamacocos wear but little clothing, they excel in the art of making personal adornments from the feathers of birds. Their country abounds with birds of the most beautiful plumage, including parrots, toucans and trogons, whose feathers are dazzling in color; rheas with gray plumes, musk ducks of a glossy black color, egrets with feathers of pure white and spoonbills of a delicate pink.

All this wealth of color and graceful plumage is combined by the Chamacocos in a most artistic manner. Some of these savages walk their forest glades in colors more brilliant, if less ample, than any woman's dressmaker could produce. - Washington

Neighborly Advice

FREELY GIVEN BY A BELLEFONTE CITIZEN.

When one has suffered tortures from a bad back and found relief from the aches and pains, that per-son's advice is of untold value to friends and neighbors. The following neighborly advice comes from a Bellefonte resident. Mrs. Sara Miller, 210 E. Howard

St. Bellefonte, says: "I had pains in my back and a dull ache across my loins. I also had headaches and dizzy spells and spots floated before my eyes. I couldn't do any lifting and if I sat down, I could hardly get up without help. I also had rheumatic twinges. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills removed the rheumatic pains and the other ailments. I have had very little trouble since."
