LULL ALONG VERDUN LINE.

French Guns Shatter Teuton Trenches in Le Petre Woods, Paris Report Declares.

The Germans are preparing to attack the French lines in a new position, Paris believes. The French official statement says that there are signs of German preparation behind the front west of Pont-a-Mousson, eighteen miles south west of Metz, and in the Moselle river region. The French guns have been pounding the second and third line German positions here, and succeeded in shattering the German trenches. It is declared, while an intermittent bombardment has been going on at various points between Regneville and Remenauville, some half dozen miles west of Pont-a-Mousson.

The lull which gave signs of setting in now extends along virtually the entire front where the desperate struggles of the past week and more have been going on. There were no important developments at any point, the French war office reports.

Unofficial commentators in entente capitals admit themselves at a loss to determine as yet whether the German drive has spent its force or whether the pause is simply the prelude to its renewal before the hard-won positions at Verdun or elsewhere on the front.

A bulletin from Berlin confirms the French account of infantry inactivity along the front, the Verdun operations not being mentioned in the official statement. It is announced, however, that the artillery, particularly in various sections of the front, the region between the Meuse and the Moselle, the Champagne and Yser region being particularly mentioned.

Apparently the recent German attack in the Champagne was nothing more than one of the numerous local operations such as the Germans carried out in several sectors of the front from time to time in the three weeks preceding the Verdun offensive, as it has not so far been followed up. Despatches indicate opinions of military observers that the German offensive if it broadened appreciably, would be more likely to spread to the south than the north, the many signs of activity along the lines in upper Alsace and down to the Swiss border being pointed to in this connection.

Paris despatches declare the situation north of Verdun satisfactory to the French, who have strongly fortified their positions from Cote du Poivre, four miles due north, to Douaumont, three miles to the east, along which line the German pressure above Verdun has been heaviest. At Douaumont itself several hundred Germans are reported still cut off in the fort, which the French have surrounded.

President Wilson May Not Run Again.

Agitation of Act to Warn Americans Off Belligerent Vessels Embarrasses Negotiations With Germany.

President Wilson is reported to have told the men who have acted as administration leaders in congress that an less congress supported his policy in the controversy with Germany over merchant ships armed for defense by voting down resolutions to warn Americans from traveling on such vessels, he will refuse to accept a renomination for the presidency.

The notice was served at a conference of the leaders in the White House. According to a recent announcement, German and Austrian submarines are to attack armed enemy merchant ships without warning.

The leaders, according to White House announcement, promised that the president's wishes should be observed. Notwithstanding this, within two hours after they had left the executive mansion there was apparent tendency by the leaders of the house to avoid compliance with the president's wishes by offering a substitute for the action which he had requested a resolution simply endorsing the president's direction of international affairs.

The views of the leaders developed to be so much in conflict with those which the president outlined at his conference, and which they are said to have pledged themselves to observe that it was proposed to appoint a joint committee to go to Mr. Wilson and ask him for an official statement of what he wants congress to do. Speaker Clark advised the foreign affairs committee of the house to recommend a joint resolution to this effect.

Many members of congress expressed themselves as being as strongly convinced as ever that the warning resolutions which were introduced last week should be passed, as a step necessary to prevent this nation being involved in war.

The leaders are inclined to believe that President Wilson will be endorsed by the house and by the senate, if the margin in the house is not large enough to avert the necessity of raising the question in the senate. They say further that they believe the president means, after getting such an endorsement to follow out his recently declared policy with regard to Germany's evasions, to its logical conclusion, which means a break in diplomatic relations.

Information regarding the president's attitude toward a renomination was given privately by persons who attended the conference at the White House.

At this meeting the president told the leaders that while dissensions in congress over the questions of warning Americans off armed ships are being made "industrious use of in foreign capitals," and being pictured as evidence that the country does not support the president in his stand for the observance of the laws of nations and humanity, his negotiations with Germany are embarrassed, and, in fact, cannot be continued.

It was learned the president told his visitors that confidential advices from Berlin showed the Teutonic powers more in the character of a "big mass meeting" rather than a closely welded nation. In consequence, the president said, it was growing increasingly hard to obtain even ordinary consideration for the demands of this government.

The president believed all this could be changed if one of the resolutions pending either in the house or senate could be voted down by an overwhelming vote. Such action, he said, almost certainly would be followed by the Teutonic powers, accepting the view of the United States on the application of international law to submarine warfare, and would end the grave situation between this country and Germany.

German Air Raid Killed Baby.

A German seaplane raided the southeast coast of England, according to a war office statement issued in London. A nine-months-old child was killed. The statement asserts that no military damage was done though the raider "dropped several bombs." It is believed in some quarters the visit was the forerunner of other raids.

BOOKS, MAGAZINES, Etc.

There never was a time in this country's history when a broad outlook upon the progress of events of national and international importance was so essential to everybody who wants to keep posted as the present. The European war is not only remaking the maps of at least three continents, but its influence is shaping political, commercial and economic conditions in the United States. It is not the function of the best of local newspapers to trace in detail the progress of these changes. That is the task of the big city daily, with its unlimited facilities of news gathering in every corner of the world—and there is no newspaper better fitted for it than the Philadelphia Record.

The Philadelphia Record, daily and Sunday, ought to be in every home. It is clean, comprehensive, fair and fearless. It prints all the news without sensationalism; rides no hobbies and grinds nobody's axes; its columns cover every field of human interest and present all the facts worth knowing about current events in concise, readable and attractive form. Its daily cartoon by DeMar is appreciated—and copied—all over the country. Its sporting page is authoritative. Farmers swear by its market reports. The Record was the first newspaper in Philadelphia to establish a department for women readers—and that department has led in its field ever since.

The Sunday issue of the Philadelphia Record, with its big fiction magazine bound in a separate colored cover, its colored comic section, its domestic science and fashion pages, its prize contests and its special feature departments, successfully aims to add to the superlative of the daily wholesome and informative reading and entertainment for every member of the family, including the juveniles.

Daily and Sunday, the Philadelphia Record follows the war, on the battlefields, abroad and in the provinces of diplomacy, legislation and industry at home, with expert understanding and tireless energy. Its services in the news field alone make it as indispensable in the home as it is on the exchange desk of its contemporaries.
