

United States Troops Enter Mexico.

Nearly the Whole Force Mobilized at Columbus, N. M., Crosses without Disturbance.

The United States army expeditionary force entered Mexico from near Columbus, N. M.

Brigadier General J. J. Pershing's main expeditionary column at Columbus crossed the boundary and started south after Villa and his bandits shortly after noon Wednesday.

The first force crossed the line in a single column without disturbance. Carranza forces that had been mobilized along the boundary joined with the American troops south of the line and accompanied them on their march south through the desolate country below the border after the bandits.

Pershing left a few minor detachments behind him. These will follow the main body quickly.

Pershing had four thousand men in his command when he left the line.

It has been said that besides Pershing's column of troops, which are said to be composed chiefly of cavalry, one or more other columns will follow from other points, and perhaps combine with his main body later.

Pershing's report that he and his command had crossed the international boundary line, just south of Columbus, was sent to Major General Frederick Funston, who is in charge of general operations at San Antonio.

His report served to dispel to a great extent fears that had been entertained in some quarters that resistance would be offered by the de facto government.

Colonel Bertani, the commanding officer of the Carranza garrison at Palomas, on the south side of the dividing line, promptly joined Pershing. His force was only some 400 men, but they were reported to have displayed willingness, and even eagerness, to join the chase.

As a body, the Mexican troops will remain under their own commander, but a number of them are being employed as scouts by General Pershing.

Reports or progress in the country where the search has been begun will be made by Pershing to Funston, but it is not anticipated these will be frequent or deal with any but the more important developments.

How far into Mexico the column has reached was unknown in El Paso.

General Gavira, Carranza commander at Juarez, Mexico, said he had received instructions from General Obregon, Carranza's minister of war to order all troops in his district to cooperate in every way with the American expeditionary force.

Juarez is quiet on the surface, but Americans met with insults in some parts of the town and there was evidence of a strong undercurrent of hostility towards the United States.

General Pershing's course for the next two days is known at headquarters in San Antonio and not until Friday are sharp developments expected.

Later it became known that Colonel George A. Dodd, heading a smaller column, that entered Mexico some distance west of Columbus, also is moving in a southerly direction, and these two forces should be within touch of each other before the end of the week.

By that time it is expected an infantry support will hold the lines of communication along which motor trucks for the transportation of ammunition and supplies will be operated.

Pershing has gone into Mexico with orders to overtake and wipe out Villa and his organization. Unless orders to the contrary are received from those higher in authority than Funston, the campaign will continue until Villa is captured or killed.
