ERZERUM

OLD

STRONGHOLD

HAS IMPORTANT

Russians are hammering at the Turkish paddock upon the northeastern borderland of Asia Minor, powerful Erzerum, which has even more importance in the defense of the Ottoman frontier than has Metz in the protection of the German boundary. While dispatches from the Caucasian war theater have been extremely meager, the news that the forces of the czar are gathering for the assault of the famous gateway in the mountains makes Erzerum one of the points of greatest present interest in all the thousands of miles of battlelines. A description of the old fortress, an Armenian stronghold when history began for this region, has been prepared by the National Geographic society at Washington. It reads as follows:

Where the Armenian plateau be comes a bleak complex of gorge and mountain, is traced the present boundary line between the Russian Caucasus and Turkey-in-Asia: and the largest city and the all-important fortress on this strong natural frontier is Erzerum, which guards the one convenient way through the ragged heights to the flatlands of Mesopotamia and the lower hills of eastern Asia Minor. The beginning of history finds this city a military station and a point of considerable strategical value; it is the Armenian fortress of Garin Kalakh of antiquity, the Arabian raiding base of Kalikale, the Byzantine frontier post, Theodosiopolis.

The Russians have twice decided wars against Turkey in their favor by the capture of Erzerum, and each time Erzerum has been handed back in the peace arrangements. While the attacks of the Russians against the fortress in 1877 were unsuccessful, their occupation of the town during the armistice of February, 1878, finally brought the Turks to accept the terms of peace. The assault and capture of the fortress by the Russian general, Paskevich, in July, 1829, decided the campaign in Asia. The fortifications of Erzerum have been strengthened, however, since it last withstood the pounding of guns forged in the workshops of the great enemy to the north, and its immensely strong key leads through the country near Lake Van. Situated at the eastern end of an open, treeless plain, 30 miles long and 12 miles wide, and surrounded on all sides by lofty mountains, steep to their bases, Erzerum enjoys a splendid setting. Within the town, encircled by an earthen enceinte, however, appearances are cramped, unfavorable and gloomy. The streets are many sizes too small, according to the Western measure, and they lack utterly in stability of direction. More-, ever, they are badly drained and dirty. and the houses by their side do not add cheer with their old unvaried facades of dark gray volcanic stone. The town has always enjoyed a fairly prosperous transit trade, for it is on the main overland route from Trebizond to northwest Persia and to the trade centers of the southern Caucasus. A good road leads from Erzerum down to the coast of Trebizond, and the journey can be made by carriage in five or six days. The place has also been noted from early times for the quality of its brass and copper work. Wheat, barley, millet and vegetables are grown in the country around, and sheep are pastured. The population of the town is 43 000, of which one-quarter is Armenian. A garrison is stationed here in peace times 5.000 strong and more.

It Looked Like a Silo.

The farmer boy had come to the state university to take the eightweeks' winter course in agriculture, says the Columbus (O.) Dispatch. He got off the High street car all right and walked toward Townshend hall. the headquarters of the eight-weeks' students. The first building which he passed was the armory. Everyone who has ever been on the university campus knows the shape of this building with its medieval architecture and its tower. The "aggie" stopped and opened his mouth in wonderment. A huge smile slowly enveloped his face. "Some silo!" he gasped as he passed on toward Townshend hall to register.

Discouraged.

Tommy, are you going to bed without saying your prayers?"

"Yessum." "You are a wicked boy."

"Aw, what's the use? I've been prayin' ever since I can remember, an' I thought the Lord was on my side, but today he let Sam Lowsel give me a black eye."

Obedient Man.

The other morning one of the regular patrons boarded the car at the usual place, but instead of taking a seat he started to walk back and forth in the car. There were plenty of seats and the action of the regular patron attracted the attention of one of his business associates.
