

Held Up and Robbed.

"Big Bill Hollenbach, former coach of the Penn State football team, and who is very well known in Bellefonte, and Mrs. Walter L. Ziegler, of Germantown, were held up last Friday night by a bold, bad highwayman and robbed of about $400 in money and jewelry. The following account of the hold-up is taken from the Philadelphia "Sunday North American."

The hold-up occurred within a short distance of the Whitemarsh Country Club, above Chestnut Hill, where Mrs. Ziegler and Hollenbach were attending a dinner-dance.

Mrs. Ziegler and her escort, during an intermission, strolled through the club's grounds. At a point fifty yards distance from the club house the faint strains of dance music were interrupted by the demand, "Stand where you are!"

Hollenbach thought it was another guest playing a joke on them, and made a move to discover the identity of the man who had halted them.

Then a flashlight was thrust in the big athlete's face, and the man demanded: "Just walk in front of me and drop your valuables, and don't make any noise."

The gleaming barrel of a revolver lent emphasis to the hold-up man's demands, and "Bill" decided it was no joke. He removed $6 from his pocket-book and placed it on the grass. It was joined by two of his rings, and while he was fumbling with his watch, Mrs. Ziegler had placed a solid gold meshbag and a vanity case, valued at $200 with the other valuables on the lawn. Then Mrs. Ziegler tried to unfasten a diamond brooch from her throat. With presence of mind, she slipped two of her rings into her dress front.

But the robber saw the move, "I'll have to search you," he said. It was then that Mrs. Ziegler ran screaming towards the clubhouse. The music stopped suddenly, seventy men and women in evening dress came scurrying from the clubhouse, and the hold-up man, grabbing up the $400 worth of loot from the ground, decided to leave.

With lights from the clubhouse, the guests groped about over the lawn for half an hour in the hope that the robber might have left some of the valuables behind. They found nothing. The episode ended the dance, and when Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler reached home they notified the police. Hollenbach borrowed some car fare to reach his home at the Normandie Apartments, corner Thirty-sixth and Chestnut streets.

Picturing Ford's Theatre Scene.

A kind of artistic achievement easy for the film, but impossible for "indoor drama" is illustrated by the Ford's theatre scene in "The Birth of a Nation," at Garman's May 31st and June 1st. The old fashioned drama has long attempted to represent a stage within a stage, and some of such representations have been rather realistic. But in the film scene showing the assassination of President Lincoln, one sees not only the complete stage of Ford's theatre in April, 1865, but also the auditorium of the theatre, the audience and the historical figures in the boxes.

Laura Keene is playing "Our American Cousin," assisted by E. A. Sothern in the role of Lord Dundreary. They are startled out of their mimic parts by the shot that Wilkes Booth fired. The audience has risen to its feet as the shot is heard and cranes forward in a semi-panic to gaze at the great statesman whose head has fallen back in the stage box and at the assassin Booth who is leaping from the box to the stage and whose spur catches in the box draperies as he jumps, causing him to break his leg.

SIX BANDITS ARE SLAIN

Glenn Springs Raiders Are Reported Badly Punished by Major Langhorne's Men.

Major General Funston received a report from Colonel Frederick W. Sibley that Jesse Deemer and his colored cook, Payne, who were carried off by Mexican bandits during the raid upon Glenn Springs and Boquillas, Texas, on the night of May 5, have been rescued, unharmed, by the troopers under Major G. T. Langhorne, who crossed the border after them a week ago.

At the same time an unconfirmed report was received from Marathon, Texas, that Langhorne's force of 200 cavalrymen, pressing their pursuit, had overtaken the bandits near Lagunda del Franco, 105 miles south of the border, and attacked them, Monday, killing six Mexicans and capturing seventy-five.

The rescue of Deemer and Payne alive, Colonel Sibley said in his report, was due to the refusal of residents of El Paso, a village where they had been left, some ninety miles south of the border, to carry out orders of the bandits who had captured them, to kill the Americans if the United States troops should attempt their rescue.

The bandits had left El Paso some hours before the American troops arrived, and only unarmed natives were found in the place. Deemer and Payne, it is understood, are being sent back to the border.

Report of the engagement with the bandits was taken to Marathon by a motor truck driver connected with the Sibley expedition. Military officers have as yet received no word of the action, but in view of Major Langhorne's announced intention to pursue the outlaws, they are inclined to give it credence.

According to the truck driver, Major Langhorne received word of the bandits' location from Mexicans at Cerra Blanco, after the rescue of Deemer and Payne, on Sunday. Guided by a friendly Mexican, a forced march was then begun. All night the horses were urged forward.

The following afternoon, the Americans sighted the bandits in a small canyon near Fresno lake. They were resting, sprawled at full length on the ground, their horses tethered nearby.

Major Langhorne distributed his forces so quietly that not until the Mexicans were surrounded did they become aware of the American troops. The Mexicans were dumbfounded. A dozen made a dash for their horses. There was a rattle of fire from American rifles and six fell. The rest were cowed and threw down their arms without further resistance. The prisoners, it was stated, would be brought to Texas for trial.

Colonel Sibley, in his report, said he was preparing to send forward as rapidly as possible hay and grain for the horses and mules. Colonel Sibley sent his report from a point about forty miles south of the border.

A posse is pursuing two Mexicans who, on Tuesday, killed Jarvis D. Harp, a Crockett county rancher. The horses taken from his ranch were found some distance from his home. It is said Harp quarreled with the Mexicans when they stopped at his ranch and that they then shot him.

FEDERAL MOVIE BILL IN

Censorship and License Measure Reported to the House.

The Hughes bill providing federal censorship of motion pictures was reported to the house by the house education committee, with the recommendation that it be adopted.

The bill provides for a federal motion picture commission of five members, with officials here, and power to appoint necessary deputy commissioners throughout the country. Under the bill all films must be licensed by this commission before they can be shipped from one state to another. Original film licenses will cost $2 a thousand feet, and duplicates fifty cents.

News films depicting current events, may be granted a license so they may be exhibited immediately after being made, with provision that such a license may be revoked if abused.

Prize fight and bull fight pictures are barred from licenses.

Brandeis Vote Next Wednesday.

The senate judiciary committee decided to vote next Wednesday on its report on the president's appointment of Louis D. Brandeis to be an associate justice of the supreme court.

Sea Fight Off Belgium.

British destroyers and monitors engaged German destroyers in a short fight off the Belgian coast, the admiral announced. The Germans withdrew. The British suffered no losses.
