Speeders and the Highway.

From the Johnstown Democrat.
Highway Commissioner F. B. Black was absolutely right when he called off the speed events scheduled for a state road near Uniontown. Now if Commissioner Black can call off the speed events being staged daily on highways all over Pennsylvania he will be deserving of still more credit.

It is hard to imagine just where motorists get the idea that the State is building highways simply so that they can crowd 40 miles of road into 60 minutes going. It is hard to imagine where motorists get the further idea that the State is permanentizing the hills so that car drivers can make them "on high." There are all too many folks running loose these days who are road-burners; who endanger their own lives and the lives of sane people who also use the highways. Every mile or so the same driver encounters the "nut" whose foot is always trying to get more and more power from his motor; who boasts that he will "take a chance"; who passes a fellow traveler on the inside of a left-hand curve or at the top of a steep hill. These are the men who make travel on good highways an abomination. These are the men who use the state's roads not to benefit themselves nor their fellows, but merely as testing tracks for their cars. And there are too many of them.

Pennsylvania is not building better highways simply that owners of cars may enjoy a drive in the cool of an evening. These better highways must serve other purposes. They are meant to expedite the marketing of farm products—to reduce the cost of this marketing—by reducing the cost and expediting the delivery to lower the price of the produce itself. Commissioner Black recognizes this fact, as did his predecessor, the late Robert J. Cunningham. The state's roads are not speedways—they are utilitarian routes for trade; they are aids to endeavor; they are sprays in the upward trend of the cost of living. The race tracks and concreted speed rings were made for the speed fiend—not the state's highways.

Submersible Boat Ready to Sail.

Baltimore, July 19.—The German merchant submarine Deutschland with every indication of being ready to sail at a moment's notice was still lying at her pier here at a late hour tonight. Her officers and crew were aboard her return cargo of nickel and crude rubber was said to be all stowed and her fuel tanks had been filled with a fresh supply of petrol.

CREW FEAR RETURN TRIP.

Baltimore, Md., July 19.—Terror-stricken and on the verge of panic the crew of the Deutschland dread the order that will start them on their return passage across the Atlantic. None believe they will escape the dragnet being thrown out by the Allied cruisers now off the capes. They feel sure that they will fall victims to the enemy cruisers, not through shot from the cannons, nor balls from the high-powered rifles in the little British patrol boats, but from disabled engines in a net that the enemy is spreading just off the three-mile limit.

The members of the crew whose names will go down in history for the creation of a new commercial era, have openly expressed this feeling to friends on Locust Point.

Everything is being made in readiness for an early departure of the vessel from Baltimore. The sailors of the Deutschland were busy today bidding goodbye to their friends. All shore leave was taken from the members of the crew at sundown today and instructions were issued that none could leave the pier to which the craft is moored.

GEORGIA FISH GO ON SPREE

Funny Tribe Is Alleged to Have Caroused Disgracefully While Atlanta Humans Thirst.

Walter Taylor, city clerk, declares that the fish in South river should have the attention of the Humane society, says the Atlanta Journal. They are being grossly mistreated by the city since the police began dumping blind tiger liquor in the sewers, he states.

He said after a trip to the river with Oscar Cochran, manager of the city parks, that he found the fish in a maudlin condition due to the excessive use of alcohol. Most of them were in a disgraceful state of intoxication, and the ones that were not were fighting to get their share.

He says the river is rapidly becoming stocked with fish from farther down the stream, coming up to get a share of the liquor. And he adds that the inhabitants of the region are trying to find a way to extract the alcohol without having to eat the fish, recognizing that the two don't go well together.

Put the Children First.

At Broad and Spring streets I saw 20 automobiles held up while Law dressed as a bluecoat, escorted a little schoolgirl across the street. The thing is repeated forty times, yes, a hundred times every day.

Nowhere else in the city does Education in short frocks and knee breeches meet Mammon in his limousine and fight for the right of way as at that point. And I'm glad to report that with one of the most efficient and best-natured "cops" in the world or guard, Mammon does more waiting than embryo Education.

"Whoa, there," exclaims the Law, as Mammon comes tearing down Broad "What the devil," roars Mammon "I'm in a hurry."

"Yes," says the Law, "but so are these children. The school bell won't wait for them."

And off goes the Law to help a bunch of laughing children across that hazardous way, while wealth in its robes and furs sits in traffic rage.

The Strawberry.

Strawberry is not its real name, though with any other name it would taste just as sweet. It came to us as a strawberry and by some sort of linguistic hocus pocus "straw" was changed to "straw." It was the straggly wanderlust that gave it a name that meant something. Down under the ground the plant sends out runners in every direction. Thus it straggled about in the dark and sent out new shoots that bear the sweetest berry the sun ever kissed. But we have become so used to strawberry that any other name in a shortcake would detract from its glory. You can not think of a strawberry shortcake. If it was on the bill of fare you would order prune pie instead. But it is well enough, not to lose the beautiful meaning, that out of a humble origin comes most of the excellence of life. But if we call it strawberry we will be sure it does not stray far from the land of luxury.—Ohio State Journal.

Care of Children's Eyes.

When the sun climbs higher every day and shines dally more brightly it is a good thing to remember that children's eyes are not quite as well adapted to bright lights as are those of grown people. Children are not often permitted to choose their hats, and if they were they would not be likely to remember the brightness of the sun at the time of the choosing. Little children in their carriages or the arms of parents are too often compelled to face a brilliant sky or even the sun itself with no adequate protection to the eyes. There is no doubt that a great deal of the trouble which affects the eyes in later life could be prevented if parents would never expect the children to face brighter lights than they themselves would find uncomfortable.—Osteopathic Magazine.

BIRD IS EXPERT BRICKLAYER

Feathered Artisan Rolls Mud Into Pellets of Required Size and Erects Substantial Home.

Years ago, before houses and barns were plentiful as they are now, the cliff swallow used to build his house of tiny mud bricks on the side of a rocky cliff. The nest builders find a convenient patch of clay, roll up the mud into tiny pellets and carry them to their nesting site. There they fashion them into a home as skillfully as any bricklayer could do it, rounding it over the top like a roof and leaving a round opening for a door.

Today the bird doesn't have to find a cliff for his home. A sheltered place under the eaves of a barn will suit him just as well. You'll find more cliff swallows today at home under the eaves than you will in their ancestral castles on the rocks.

The bird wears a shiny blue-black coat and a brownish-yellow vest. His tail, reddish-brown, is only slightly forked, which distinguishes him from the regular "swallow-tails."

Perhaps you have been told that the nest of the cliff swallow is infested with bedbugs, and perhaps you have torn down all the nests you could find to get rid of the pests. This is a common slander against the swallow. The nest contains no insects which can be communicated to the house. On the other hand, the cliff swallow performs immeasurable benefit by destroying many leaf bugs and weevils. —Philadelphia North American.
