—One of the many pleasing letters we have received from subscribers during the Holiday Season:

"The 'Watchman' is an excellent paper in every respect except its politics, in which connection no improvement is discernible."

Of course you will all understand that the writer of the above is an uncompromising Republican for which we forgive him on the ground that he is not altogether hopeless, for he still discerns the real news value of the "Watchman" and, we opine, that he frequently agrees with its editorial utterances, as well.

—A happy Holiday home coming was that of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Lucas, of Blairsville, who, with their children Lisle and Lucille, arrived at the home of grandfather and Mrs. H. N. Jones, in Milesburg, the day after Christmas. Mrs. Lucas will be remembered as a Bellefonte hospital nurse, before her marriage. Grandfather Jones, poor deluded soul, thinks he's different from the ordinary grand-parent and swears that he doesn't do a thing to spoil the grand-children, but the very fact that he was in Bellefonte visiting the toy shops and arranging for a Christmas tree for the little folks long before they arrived; is prima-facie evidence that he's about as good pickin' for a cute kid as every other grand-dad we know of is.

Great Minstrel Show the New Year's Celebration at the New Penitentiary.

Monday night was a remarkable one for the inmates of the new Western penitentiary at Rock View. It was New Year's night and they celebrated it by staging a minstrel and vaudeville show, which kept the five hundred or more men in an uproar of laughter for two hours.

A stage was erected across the north end of what is now the east dormitory room, which will really be one of the spacious dining halls when the institution is completed. Of course you will understand that in such a place many makeshifts have to be resorted to, but with a very stagey looking stage was worked out with the odds and ends the inmates had access to. There were real foot lights, wings, tormentor, flies and drops, painted specially for this show by someone with talent before he went to Rock View to reside.

All of the inmates, numbering four hundred and forty-four, with the overseers and other officers of the institution were assembled in the play house when the writer arrived. Beds, boxes, stools and chairs were requisitioned for seats and the Rock View band was playing the "Rock View Symphony" preparatory to the rise of the curtain. It looked like a real show and there was pleasurable anticipation written on the faces of everyone of the spectators. Those fortunate enough to possess the weeds were smoking and chatting in an orderly, expectant way, but the low mumble of conversation was hushed when a quartette began to sing behind the scenes.

Then the curtain rolled revealing the stage set for a court scene. All manner of misdemeanors were on the "socket," as the judge persisted in calling it, and a large sign at the rear admonished those having business in court "Don't spit on the floor, spit on the Judge." The judge, the district attorney, the policeman and the various culprits were all good in their parts but the "ambulance chasing lawyer" who defended all comers, was a star and we wondered, as we listened to him, how in the world he ever got to Rock View with such power of argumentation with which to defend himself. The gist of this act came when the Judge quashed an indictment against a fellow for stealing a case of beer. It developed that there were only nine bottles in the case, whereupon the Judge promptly ruled that nine bottles never would make a case and discharged the prisoner instanter.

Then followed a team of clever Yiddishers who amused the crowd immensely, some street patter and a farce entitled "On the Border." It had a lot of real comedy in it and was acted to a finish. When "Sambo" finally caught Villa and choked him to death with his naked hands nearly everybody was convulsed.

The latter half of the show was staged by the colored contingent in the institution and would have done credit to a professional aggregation. In fact one of the leads was a professional and he danced and acted like he had been a very good one at that. There was singing, dancing, monologues and bits of comedy, with just the right swing to them to call for numerous encores and the colored actors were unmistakably happy over the hit they made.

We understand that there had been some rivalry while the show was in rehearsal as to which crowd would give the best acts. The immense audience may not have been a very discriminating one but its applause certainly gave the greatest approval to the colored boys.

At eight o'clock the show ended, the band played again and the men all filed out to their quarters to think and talk over what certainly must have been a very bright opening of the New Year for them.

To Organize a Farm Bureau.

A preliminary meeting was held at State College during Farmers' week by the farmers of Centre county for the purpose of establishing a Farm Bureau. Thirty-six counties in the State have Farm Bureaus in active operation with extension representatives at work.

The farmers of Centre county at this meeting felt that Centre county should have the advantages of such an organization and took preliminary steps toward securing one. Arrangements have been made for holding meetings in various parts of the county at which this work will be explained and also, to later on, hold a county-wide meeting at Bellefonte for the purpose of organizing the Centre county Farm Bureau.

Meetings will be held at Howard, Spring Mills, Pine Grove, Stormstown, Philipsburg, Boalsburg, Zion and Wadde. Definite arrangements have been made to hold a meeting at Howard on Friday afternoon, January 12, at 2 p. m.; another at Pine Grove, January 13 at 7:30 p. m.; another at Spring Mills, January 13, at 1 p. m.

A representative from the extension department of the college will be present at these meetings to explain the advantages and work of the Extension Representatives and how the Farm Bureau is organized.

We would urge that as many as possible of the Centre county people attend these meetings.

Thursday, February 1, at 10 a. m., has been selected as the date for the county-wide meeting to be held in the court house at Bellefonte for the purpose of completing this organization.

YERGER—DALE.—A wedding that was somewhat of a surprise to the people of Bellefonte was that on Tuesday of last week of Howard Yerger, of Patton, and Miss Virginia Dale, daughter of Mrs. John M. Dale, of this place. Motoring to State College they were married by Father O'Hanlon at his residence. The only witnesses present were the bridegroom's parents and Mrs. T. A. Shoemaker, of this place. Immediately after the ceremony the young couple motored to Tyrone and took the train for Ames, Iowa, where Mr. Yerger is taking a post graduate course and is also serving as director of athletics.

—They are all good enough, but the WATCHMAN is always the best.

Presbyterian Sunday School Presents Cantata.

"An American Santa Claus" was the title of a very melodious, attractively staged and splendidly acted Christmas cantata, which the scholars of the Bellefonte Presbyterian Sunday school gave in the chapel Wednesday and Thursday evenings of the Holiday week.

The first performance was purely an entertainment for the Sunday school itself, while the second was given for the benefit of the Bellefonte hospital and resulted in earning $17.40 for that worthy institution.

It is not often that such pretentious entertainments are undertaken for Christmas festivals. This one might have been staged at Garman's and been received as a quite worthy offering for a real play house. The little folks worked for a month under the coaching of Supt. Jas. R. Hughes and they must all have felt wonderfully repaid for their efforts because of the enthusiastic reception they received each evening.

We regret that an unusual demand on our space this issue precludes mentioning each one of the large cast, for they all deserved it. Over and above everything else, however, stood out the tunefulness of the music-score and the dash with which the children sang it.

They seemed to have the assurance of professionals, both in their acting and singing, and worked to the presentation of a charming little story with most pleasing results.

A New Industry to be Tried Out in Bellefonte.

Carloads of special machinery are now on the way to Bellefonte for installation at the plant of the Bellefonte Engineering Co. This marks the beginning of an experimental operation by the Abrams Engineering Co., of Pittsburgh, to make straightening machines and other accessories for rolling mill machinery at this place.

By February 1st the new concern will be in charge there for the purpose of trying out the labor situation here, for when developed to its full capacity the plant will require from four to five hundred men.

The Abrams Engineering Co., is a subsidiary of one of the largest steel concerns in the country, and is giving Bellefonte a tryout largely through the connections which Dr. Chas. F. Hennig enjoys with a number of those interested. While at first the work will cover only the machine shops of the old plant the plans are to take over the foundry later. There they will make their own castings and then build a steel foundry in which to make the steel castings that are a necessary part of the business.

If the labor situation fulfills their hope two other affiliated concerns will locate here and an immense new industry, with plenty of capital to back it, will be the New Year's greeting that the industrial world gives to Bellefonte.

Joseph Harbold, present manager of the Bellefonte Engineering Co., will become superintendent of the machine shops. The heads of the operating departments will be Pittsburgh men. Mr. Harbold is to be given time to close up his present contracts and get the plant in condition to be turned over to the new concern, but it will be done as speedily as possible.

When Dreams Come True.

Philip Bartholmae's dreams seem to be coming true these days, at least in the material sense of pleasing audiences who are in search of something light, amusing and at the same time of sufficient merit to distract attention from more serious things. In conjunction with Silvio Hein, the provider of the music, Mr. Bartholmae has put forward in "When Dreams Come True," an interesting rival of the musical plays which have gone before, and he has managed to inject a satisfactory amount of the characteristics of his comedy essays. Mr. Hein, from the standpoint of the popular catchiness in his special musical numbers, maintains himself well in all the nearly two score that are provided. Chief among these is "When Dreams Come True" the song which gives the play its title and which runs through some of the orchestral instrumentation.

"When Dreams Come True" will be seen at Garman's Tuesday evening, January 9th. Prices 35, 50, 75, $1.00 and 1.50. Building heated by own plant.
