Mistletoe Was Ancient Panacea.
Numerous curious and ridiculous superstitions as to methods of preventing disease were believed in years ago, and are not altogether extinct even today, it is said.

Much ancient faith clustered about the mandrake root, which was carved in the form of a doll, dressed in fine clothes, and kept in a box or coffin concealed in some corner of the house. Each month it was washed in wine and water and freshly garbed.

Another universal cure was to carry a piece of mistletoe which had been cut from a tree by a golden sickle and caught in a white vessel as it fell. Metal scraped from a church bell or a piece of the rope was supposed to have a similar protective influence against disease, as also a cloth stained in the blood of a murderer, or the rope with which he was hanged.

Death of Death.
The time may not be far off when to lose a friend by death will be hardly more than to have him cross the ocean; when our own passing will be merely the happy setting sail for a new country. It may be that in the great war, which has furnished an orgy such as the world has never before seen, death as we have known it in all its agony of parting and uncertainty, has at least been glutted to the full, has reached its climax, and must hereafter diminish.

O people of the world, all things have died! It may be that now at last death itself is dying!—From the Atlantic Monthly.

All He Cared About.
Harold is fond of fowl. One day he came to the house breathless. "Oh, mamma," he said, "Jimmy's mamma ain't going to have no turkey for Christmas. Is we?"

"Well, son," answered the mother, "perhaps we will have duck or goose, or it may be just chicken."

"Oh, that's all right," said Harold. "Just so it's something with legs on it."
