They then detrained and marched to the Boal camp at Boalsburg.

Farm Bureau Movement is Contagious. The farm bureau, county agent, county agriculturist, extension representative or farm demonstrator movement, as it is variously aud popularly known, was inaugurated in Pennsylvania in 1912 with the organization of five counties. The work has grown until at the present time there are extension representatives in thirty-six counties. Five counties are organized and will be supplied with a leader as soon as funds are available, and in fourteen other counties the movement is being strongly agitated.

Concrete examples which show the value of farm bureau movement in several counties in which it has already been established might be multiplied. Here

In Lycoming county last spring the county extension representative, R. H. Bell, saw the necessity for some measure which would lessen the prevalence of, and losses from, oats smut in the county. The names of those desiring formalin with which to treat their seed oats were secured at various meetings held throughout the county during the winter and early spring, and through other channels. The plan adopted was to supply the material purchased by the farmers direct by mail, together with directions for using it. In all about 200 farmers were supplied.

Reports recently received from eighty of these farmers show an average infestation of oats smut where seed was not treated of 7 per cent. and of 1.1 per cent. in the case of treated seed. On the basis of 40 bushels to the acre this would mean a saving of 7920 bushels to those treating their seed oats. The money saving may readily be figured. About 30 per cent. of the farmers who treated their seed oats also treated their seed potatoes to guard against scab. The acreage reported by those treating potatoes was about onefourth of the total for the county. Assuming a yield of 40 bushels to the acre, the total savings, on the basis of a saving of 6 per cent. for the entire county, would be 55,400 bushels.

Similar examples of savings effected through an oats smut campaign are available for many other counties of the Centre county has quite a number of resentative started the campaign. Applications were received from Harry Dukeman for reappointment as chief of police and Elmer Yerger as patrolman, and upon recommendation of the Fire and Police committee both were reappointed for one year, or as long as their service is satisfactory.

The Street committee reported ten dollars received for a sewer permit, and that work had been begun on the Bishop street sewer. Report was also made that Mr. Thomas, one of the employees on the street, mashed his thumb on Monday.

The Water committee, through chairman Seibert, presented the State-Centre Electric company's bill for pumping ter and also bills for labor and repairs on the water system. Mr. Seibert also called attention to the fact that on the State-Centre company's list of water taxes there was still $5,591 uncollected and council voted that the company be requested to hurry up the collections.

The Fire and Police committee reported the burgess' check for $60.00 for fines and licenses.

The Finance committee presented the treasurers' report which showed a balance on January 1st, 1917, of $8,310.57.

Mr. Harris stated that J. L. Montgomery, of the Pennsylvania Match company, made the proposition that if the borough would install the old fire alarm on the Match company boilers and arrange for the placing of both telephones in the boiler room that the company would willingly sound the fire alarm. Council voted to accept the proposition which will solve the fire alarm question for the present, at least.

Secretary W. T. Kelly presented two policies for compensation insurance, one from the Ocean Insurance company, which carried the borough insurance last year, and one from the Aetna Insurance company, represented by John F. Gray & Son. Council voted to accept the latter and instructed the secretary to return the former.

Bills to the amount of $5,046.34, which included $2,000 into the sinking fund, were approved and council adjourned.

Associated Charities Christmas Distribution. The Associated Charities made its usual distribution of food and fuel at the Christmas season. Thirty-four baskets of groceries, ten loads of coal and two loads of wood were sent out. Some clothing was contributed and purchased, and toys, candy and oranges were carried to the children of the community Christmas morning. Mr. Hard Harris and Mr. Edmund Blanchard kindly offered their assistance in acting as Santa Claus, and kept their cars busy for over two hours on this joyous errand. More than forty families and over one hundred children were thus remembered by the Association, which was acting as distributive agent for several benevolent socities of the town, and a number of private citizens. The principal contributions were received from the Elks and the Soldiers' Relief fund. Others were Col. J. L. Spangler, J. S. McCargar, Edward Richard, Mrs J. L.
