Taylor to visit that institution last Friday afternoon and talk to his boys on not alone the necessity but the advantages of military training. The colonel accepted the invitation and gave the students a half hour talk after which he volunteered to act as their military instructor if enough of them were wilworth while. In response to this implied call every one of the one hundred students volunteered to go into training. The result was that they took their first lesson on Saturday when the colonel gave them an hour's lecture in the armory. The boys are very enthusiastic and have already signified their intention of electing Clifford Stansburg, of Jamestown, N. Y., and Willard Watson, of Jersev Shore. both of whom have had two years' training in a military academy, as their captain and first lieutenant respectively when the students are organized into a company and begin to drill. In the meantime they will be given an hour's work in the armory every Saturday, from 10 to 11 o'clock. Any High school students, or other young men of the town or county who will assemble at the armory at the above named hour can have the advantage of Col. Taylor's military talks and training, and whether war comes or not they will find it to be a good thing in the end. Boy scouts and would-be boy scouts are also invited.
