The Same Old Tariff Taxes.

From the New York Evening Post. If nothing more is to be said against the new revenue bill than is contained in the report of the Republican minority, it might as well go through at once. Not a word is uttered about the difficulties of the excess-profits tax; no objection is made to the bond is-sues. All the Republican wrath is spent upon Democratic wastefulness. The minority criticise the unscientific financial policy of their opponents, unmindful that the retort is obvious. Why did not the Republican party, during 16 years of power, put through a budget system? And, what has it manufacturers by shutting out foreign goods, and raise an enormous customs revenue on those goods as they come in.
