CHARGED WITH GRAVE CRIME. Philadelphia Man Held at Clearfield as Alleged Attempted Murderer.

After a ten day chase over four States and into the District of Columbia C. J. Logan, alias J. R. Crawford, an employee of a private detective agency of Philadelphia, was finally captured in Washington by county detective Hugh Jeffrey, of DuBois, and landed in the Clearfield county jail on Tuesday of last week. Logan is under the serious charge of attempted murder.

The case is of state-wide interest and is an incident in connection with a criminal action brought in the Philadelphia county courts a few months ago against E. J. Brill, the wealthy car builder, by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Seabrook, of Westover, Clearfield county. Brill was charged with adultery and being the father of the five year old child of Mary Seabrook, who at the time was a nurse in his home.

While the action was pending and before the trial of Brill Logan went to Westover, it is alleged for the purpose of obtaining any evidence he could that would be favorable to Brill. He managed to worm his way into the good graces of the Seabrook family and then, it is alleged, attempted to murder Mr. Seabrook by putting poison in a drink of gin, and made an attempt on the girl's life by trying to induce her to take some kind of dope as headache powders. Seabrook became very sick but recovered after an antidote had been given him, while the girl did not take the dope but instead turned it over to the district attorney of Clearfield county.

At the trial of Brill in January he claimed that he had already settled the case with the girl by paying her five thousand dollars and after hearing the evidence a nolle contendere was entered and Brill was paroled by the court.

Logan was held in $10,000 bail for trial at the May term of Clearfield county court, and bail was furnished by Philadelphia parties.

FLAG RAISED AT JULIAN. A Good Crowd in Attendance Sunday Afternoon.

One of the biggest flags so far flung to the breeze in Centre county is the one raised in front of the school house at Julian on Sunday afternoon. The flag was purchased by the citizens of the town at the solicitation of the school children, and despite the fact that the weather was raw and cold a good crowd was in attendance.

The exercises were in charge of Frank W. Dillen, teacher of the school, and he was assisted by Roland Williams, and a large choir. Previous to the opening of the exercises the school children formed at the school house and marching double file, with each one carrying a small flag, they marched around the main business block in the town and formed a square around the flag. Following an appropriate song by the choir prayer was offered by Rev. H. C. Cramer, of the Port Matilda charge of the Methodist church. During the singing of "The Flag of My Country," the beautiful emblem was hoisted to the top of a forty-five foot pole by six veterans of the Civil war.

Miss Julia Bullock, the fourteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bullock, was then introduced and gave a splendid recitation on the origin of the flag. Patriotic addresses were then made by Rev. Cramer, Burgess Edmund Blanchard and Col. H. S. Taylor, of Bellefonte, though the latter was compelled to cut his speech short on account of a threatened shower. But, notwithstanding this fact, the flag now floats in the breeze at Julian, an every day emblem of the fact that there is just as much patriotism and loyalty among her citizens now as there was when so many of her noble sons responded to the call of President Lincoln in the trying days of 1861.

The writer of this article as well as the Bellefonte gentlemen who spoke at the flag raising are under obligations to Mr. J. H. Turner, who not only conveyed us from Bellefonte to Julian but landed all safe at home.

Was It An Aeroplane.

Several weeks ago the "Watchman's" Lemont correspondent reported that an aeroplane had been seen sailing over Boalsburg and Oak Hill on two occasions. At the time very little consideration was given the statement. And now comes Frank E. Nagin, a well known citizen of Bellefonte, who avers that he not only heard an aeroplane sail over Bellefonte at two o'clock on Sunday morning, but that he got out of bed, went to the window and could distinctly tell that the machine was flying almost due west. He could see no light, however, to denote the location of the machine.

The question now is, was it an aeroplane that has been heard on the above occasions, and if not, what was it? And if it was an air-man making a flight, where did he come from and what was he doing in this section of the State? The nearest aviation school to Bellefonte is Philadelphia, though an amateur station is located at Williamsport, but it would hardly be likely that any one from either place would be flying in this locality.

Christian Patriotic Service at the Academy.

A christian patriotic service will be held on the campus at the Bellefonte Academy on Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock to which the public at large is cordially invited. Three prominent speakers will be present in the persons of Dean Arthur Holmes, of State College; Col. J. L. Spangler and Col. H. S. Taylor, of Bellefonte. Mr. Robinson, of State College, the man who is in charge of the music at that institution, will be present to take charge of the singing.

As this is a purely patriotic meeting it would be a highly commendable act if some band would volunteer their services for this occasion. Persons living in the country cannot spend the afternoon in a better way than in motoring to Bellefonte to attend this meeting.

A meeting of Bellefonte patriotic citizens has been called for this (Friday) evening, in the arbitration room of the court house, to discuss the advisability of forming a Red Cross organization. Every man, woman and child should be eager to add their mite in the country's effort to relieve the distress of the present appalling war conditions, this opportunity being given only through direct association with the National Red Cross of America. Col. J. L. Spangler having consented to lead this movement, has spent a part of the past week in both Washington and New York, in search of information for the most direct and practical methods to be used, and will tell you of them tonight. Go to the court house and join the Red Cross, with the intention of helping to make it one of the most successful branch organizations of the country.

If you find it in the "Watch-
