GERMAN LOAN PLEA PLAYED ON FEARS.

Success of U Boats and Overthrow of the Czar Cited as Arguments for Subscriptions—Soldiers at the Front Urge Relatives at Home to Buy War Securities.

How the German government appealed to the hopes and fears of its subjects in its calls for subscriptions to the sixth war loan of $3,570,000,000 voted by the reichstag over the opposition of the Socialist minority on Feb. 23 is brought out in items found in German newspapers recently received in New York and London. The time for subscribing to the loan officially expired on April 16, and on April 27 Count von Roedern, secretary of the imperial German treasury, is reported to have announced that the amount pledged to date was almost $3,094,000,000, with some of the men at the front still to be heard from.

Dangers Menacing German Homes.

In addition to the special references made in the appeals issued after April 6 to the necessity of "giving a straight answer to Wilson," mentioned in cablegrams to the American press, the German war loan pleas laid great emphasis upon the alleged atrocities committed by the allies and the danger menacing German homes in case the enemy succeeded in breaking the German defense lines. Here is an appeal printed in the Kolnische Zeitung:

"Remember that our foes have rejected the sincere offer of peace by our kaiser, rejected it with insolent mockery. Remember that England, who cannot conquer us with honorable weapons, engaged in a cowardly starvation war against our women, children and aged. Remember that France stirs up murderously against you, that she sends colored beasts against your sons, brothers and fathers in the field. Remember what Russia's savage Cossack hordes have made of the flourishing East Prussian province and its peaceful inhabitants. Remember that 'neutral' America has broken off relations with us because our submarines have disturbed its 'business.' Remember the treachery of Roumania and Italy. Remember the maltreatment of our imprisoned heroes in enemy countries. Remember the bombing of peaceful, undefended towns by our foes. Remember the Baralong."

"If you remember all this you will know what you have to expect and what you have to do. Everything is at stake. Subscribe to the sixth war loan and compel our enemies to make peace."

The Kolnische Volkszeitung, a leading organ of the Clerical party, printed the following:

"We battle in storm wind and weather turmoil; we hold out in the rain of bullets and protect the homeland with our hard, horny hands. See that we are not beaten and help us to victory. In hunger and thirst and hard necessity we obey the dictate of the hour. Help us to victory."

"Our blood is flowing in torrents from the North sea to the Euxine. We suffer from frost and from the sun's pitiless heat. We suffer unending tortures for our country. But our eagle's wings still fly proudly. Help us to victory. It is to you we look to nerve the armed fist so that when the storm of battle rages our hands more firmly grasp the rifle, so that we break the deceitful enemy's power. Give us gold and silver for the fight. Help us to victory."

Optimistic Note Introduced.

In the official advertisements of the war loan an optimistic note is often found, as is evidenced by the following excerpt:

"Everything is tottering!
"On all the fronts we have torn away immense territories from the enemy!
"Our submarines have administered the deathblow to enemy commerce!
"The authors of the war, Grey and Asquith, Delcasse and Briand, have been hunted by their own peoples from their offices and honors!
"In Russia there is revolution! The czar has been deposed!
"Only one thing stands firm—the solid foundation of the German state fabric and the unconquerable strength of the German people. Upon this rests the absolute security of the German war loans."

"Help to win the war! Give your money to the fatherland, the safest debtor in the world!"

Letters from soldiers at the front advising their relatives to buy war securities were also prominently displayed in the press. One of these epistles, credited to "a brave landwehr soldier," writing from Romania to his wife in a village near Osnabruck, reads:

"Today I write to you about the war loan. I know you subscribed to four out of the last five loans, but now comes the sixth and, we hope, the last. And as the end is approaching we must make a special effort. I am sure you have not got much more money at home or in the savings bank. But, as you wrote to me, we have still got a quantity of other things which we can turn into money. Sell as soon as you can our one cow and the calf, the last remaining pig and some of the geese, for it is more important for us to get money than to have a cow or a geese."

BIG OPPORTUNITY TO LEARN FLYING

Several Sections For Aviators In Signal Corps.

FOUR STATIONS ARE OPEN

Physical Requirements Are Extremely Rigid, However, and None but Physically Perfect Are Accepted—All May Not Get a Chance to Fly, but Those Who Make Good Will Get It.

For the man who desires to learn aviation the war offers opportunities that never before existed and may never again. There is no one branch of the service for aviation, but there are several sections for fliers under the signal corps in the army and five branches in the navy.

Three opportunities to learn to fly are enumerated in the Directory of Service. This is the section addressed to those with ambitions to soar:

"They can enlist in the aviation section of the signal enlisted reserve corps of the army, which is operating schools at Mineola, N. Y.; at Washington, Chicago, San Antonio, Tex., and San Diego, Cal. But there are already 3,000 upon the waiting list at Mineola, headquarters for this district, so that practically the only opening for aspirants at present is in the navy."

"Men can join either the aviation section of the naval militia or one of the units of the national aerial coast patrol. The navy itself has no organization for aviation as yet, and the naval militia's aviation section is nearly full. The national aerial coast patrol is the best field at present for learning aviation. There are already formed six units—at Harvard, Columbia, Yale, etc.—and more are being formed daily."

Physical Requirements Rigid.

"Physical requirements for any aviation division are extremely rigid. An applicant must have perfect sight and hearing, sound lungs, a first class heart (the slightest weakness disqualifies), and must be absolutely immune to sea-sickness. No applicant need consider the aviation service unless he is in the prime of health and athletic condition."

"Men enlisted in the signal corps of the army may serve as nonfliers in the aviation section."

"Requirements: Applicants must be between eighteen and thirty-five, unmarried, citizens and able to pass a physical examination."

"A certain number of the enlisted men of the aviation section of the signal corps may be examined for the rating of aviation mechanic."

"There is especial need for men qualified as aviators or balloonists and for mechanics who have had experience in connection with the construction and repair of airplanes or internal combustion engines."

May Be Promoted to Fliers.

"Enlisted men, in general, are nonfliers and repair the planes and motors, magnetos, carburetors, etc. They may also be promoted to the flier rank."

"The reserve aviation section of the signal corps is divided into two parts—(a) the signal officers' reserve corps, aviation section and (b) the signal enlisted reserve corps, aviation section."

"The signal officers' reserve corps, aviation section, contains the military fliers. The signal enlisted reserve corps, aviation section, contains the nonfliers or nonflying personnel, those men who have a knowledge of machines, motors, magnetos, carburetors, etc., and who work on the motors, planes, etc. It also contains those who are learning to fly in order to qualify for commissions in the signal officers' reserve corps, aviation section."
