Plain Questions to Bellefonte People

EVERY BELLEFONTE READER WILL ADMIT THE SOUNDNESS OF THE LOGIC.

Would Bellefonte people recom-mend Doan's Kidney Pills as they do if the medicine were not reliable? would they confirm their statements after years have elapsed if their ex-periences did not show the remedy to be deserving of it? Statements like the following must carry conviction to the mind of every reader:

Mrs. J. C. Johnson, 365 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, says: "I was a great sufferer from backache and pains across my loins. I could hardly get about the house. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would nearly fall. got Doan's Kidney Pills at Green's Pharmacy Co., and two boxes did me more good than anything else I had previously tried. The backache and pains disappeared and my kidneys became normal. I now feel better in every way."

THE CURE LASTED. Over six years later Mrs. Johnson said: "Time has proven that Doan's Kidney Pills are reliable. The cure they made for me has been permanent.

How Men Behave Under Heavy Fire.

It seems certain that the present war will furnish new facts concerning the psychology of the battlefield. It should be remembered that, as the Encyclopedia Bratannica says, in a very graphic way, "the duration of a cam-paign is largely affected by the deadly properties of modern firearms. It is true that the losses in battle are relatively less than in the days of Brown Bess and the smooth-bore cannon, and almost insignificant when compared with the fearful carnage wrought by the sword and spear. The reason is simple. "A battlefield in the old days, except at close quarters, was a comparatively safe locality, and the greater part of the troops engaged were seldom exposed for a long time together to a hot and continuous fire. Today death has a far wider range, and the strain on the nerves is consequently far more severe. Demoralization Mrs. P. R. Hackman, who was not therefore, sets in at an earlier period,

"When troops once realize their inferiority, they can no longer be depended on. It is not the losses they have actually suffered, but those that they expect to suffer, that affect them. Unless discipline and national spirit are of superior quality, unless the soldier is animated by something higher than the mere habit of mechanical obedience, panic, shirking and wholesale surrender will be the ordinary features of a campaign. "These phenomena made themselves apparent, though in a less degree, as long ago as the American Civil war, when the weapon of the infantry was a muzzle-loading rifle, firing at most two round a minute, and when the projectiles of the artillery were hardly more destructive than the stone shot of Mons Meg. With the magazine rifle, machine guns, shrapnel and high explosives they have become more pronounced than even at Vionville or Plevna. "'The retreat of the Thirty-eighth (Prussian) Brigade,' writes Captain Hoenig, an eye witness of the former battle, forms the most awful drama of the great war. It had lost 5,370 of its strength, and the proportion of killed to wounded was three to four. Strong men collapsed inanimate—l saw men cry like children, others fell prone without a sound; in most cases the need of water thrust forth all other instincts; the body demanded its rights. "Water, water," was the only intelligible cry that broke from those morning phantoms. The evening's lead poured like hail upon the wretched remnant of the brigade; yet they moved only slowly to the rear, their heads bent in utter weariness; their features distorted under the thick dust that had gathered on faces dripping with sweat.

"'The strain was beyond endurance. The soldier was no longer a receptive being; he was oblivious of everything, great or small. His comrades or superiors he no longer recognized; and yet he was the same man who but a short time before had marched across the battle-field shouting his marching chorus. A few active squadrons and not a man would have escaped! Only he who had seen State College, on Tuseday autoed to men in such circumstances, and obful imprint that their features leave upon the memory. Madness is there, days with his family, returning to his exhaustion combined with the most abject terror. I do not shrink,' he adds, 'from confessing that the fire of Mars-la-Tour affected my nerves for months." It should be borne in mind that Mars-la-Tour was one of the engagements of the Franco-Prussian war of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Stricker and children, of Yeagertown, also Miss Georgie Stricker, of Syracuse, N. Y., spent Sunday under the parental roof. of the great armies engaged in the
