Flyers Return to Train Men.

Experienced flyers are being returned from abroad to act as special instructors in the more advanced courses of aviation training.

"Recent practice in elemental training now gives the candidate more time in the air with his instructor than heretofore," states the announcement. "The new plan is known as the gosport system, or 'all through' as it is popularly known in Washington, and insures closer contact between the cadet and the instructor."

When the cadets arrive at a flying field from a ground school where they have learned much of the theory of flight, several are assigned to an instructor, who stays with them until they have qualified in elemental flying. They are then sent to special schools for final work and training in their particular line.

"The old practice of turning a cadet loose for his first solo flight in a sink or swim fashion is being discontinued," the War Department states.—Ex.

Pershing Pays Tribute to 28th.

The Allied victory which followed the smashing of the German offensive on the Marne, in which the Americans figured, "marked the turning point of the war," General Pershing declares in a general order made public on Wednesday. The American commander pays a high tribute to the work of the American division which participated in the hottest fighting in the Marne region. The first, second, third, fourth, twenty-sixth, twenty-eighth, thirty-second and forty-second divisions received honorable mention. "They came to the battlefield at the crucial hour of the Allied cause," the general order states.

Meaning of Bolsheviki.

The curious Russian word, with its ominous combination of alphabetical symbols, has found its way across the Atlantic ocean and into the columns of the American press. This, however, is not strange, for the American newspapers are the storehouses of a great many curiosities.

The average newspaper reader may have wondered what this word really means and could guess at it only from the character bestowed upon these Bolsheviki by the press. But if he analyzes the word he will find it perfectly harmless.

Then there is the pronunciation. The word bolsheviki is the plural of bolshevik. The singular pronounces bol-she-vik with the accent on the bol. The plural has the accent on the she, bol-she-viki. In English the pronunciation may be given as bol-shay-vee-kee. The final syllable has almost as much accent as the one before it. This change of accent occurs also in English, when another syllable is added to a word. In this way we say ani-mate and ani-ma-ton, analyze and anal-ysis.

Bolsheviki is composed of two parts, the bolsh, which comes from bolshoi, meaning many, just as menshoi means few. Bolshoi is the equivalent of the Latin multi, many, and the Russian root bol and the Latin root mul have the same significance. The ending, vik-plural viki—indicates the superlative. Just as we say great, greatest, so the Russians say bolshoi, bolsheviki. The oi is changed to e for the sake of euphony.

It cannot be said that the Russian language is what you may call popular in America. This unpopularity is due to the formidable array of letters which compose the words of that language—in other words, to our unfamiliarity with these combinations of letters.

This may be illustrated by citing the case of the fortress Przemysl, the pronunciation of which caused all kinds of comment in the press at the time that it was in the limelight. Yet, when looked into more closely, it becomes simple enough. The rz has the sound of the English sh. When it is considered that letters are arbitrary symbols which are used to indicate certain sounds of a language the use of rz for the sh sound is just as reasonable as that of any other combination of consonants. If school children had been taught to spell shoot, shout, shave, shiver in the Polish way—zoot, rout, raze, rivier they would take that spelling as a matter of course. So it is, after all, a matter of familiarity with the appearance of words that makes the difference. Americans cannot all have Russian grammars available to look up the sounds of the letters of the Russian alphabet.

The fact is that the English language is not scot-free in this respect. Russians who have tackled the English language complain bitterly about the difficulties in the spelling, accusing us of using in some cases one hundred per cent. more letters than are needed to spell a word. They point to the word though, which could be and is being spelled tho. They cannot understand why we should go out of our way six letters in spelling a word when three would do as well.

As to the political significance of the word, as understood and used at the present time, this depends entirely upon the point of view. Since bolsheviki, in the superlative, means the greatest number, or, more broadly, the masses, it may be translated into the people, the populace, the mob, the proletariat or any other name of similar meaning that might appeal to the literary taste of the individual reader. The bolsheviki are just now busily occupied at home and will not have time to worry over what people several thousand miles away think of them when their own fellow citizens keep them awake at night.

There is just one more explanation to be added regarding the meaning of the word. The final syllables, vik-i, express, as has been shown, the superlative, and in that sense may also express the extreme. The bolsheviki are, therefore, called the maximalists, or extremists, in contradistinction to the minimalists or conservatives. The maximalists represent just now the revolutionary majority of the people, the masses; the minimalists stand for the minority, as the word indicates. There is, however, a distinction in the application of the words bolsheviki and maximalist. A bolshevik is always a maximalist, but a maximalist is not necessarily a bolshevik. The word maximalist is general in its meaning and application, while bolshevik has a restricted party sense. This can be explained more clearly by examining the party names in the United States. The United States is a democracy, therefore every citizen is a democrat or a maximalist. A republican is a democrat as a citizen of our democracy, or a maximalist, but as a republican he is also a party man or a minimalist, just as a democrat is such either in the broad national sense or in the restricted party meaning.

We therefore, read in the newspapers about bolshevik and maximalist members of the Russian duma. As such they are mere party members, although their general policies may be the same.—Ex.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

COLUMBIA, HEAR US!

Hear our vow,—accept our consecration! Columbia, hear us!

Bid us die, if so we save the nation, Bid us! Bid us! Bid us!

Never, never shall thy children fall thee! Never! Never!

Take our life,—our all, when foes assail thee!

Take us! Take us! A bounteous land, a freeman's law, the highest aims thy sons thou givest;

A will to serve,—a heart to feel,—a mind to know the right we own;

Oh Freedom's home! to reach thy shores, the toil worn millions tempt thee brave;

The Lord of Hosts shall guard that globe of truth and hope our sties have sown;

"A mighty fortress is our God,—A bulwark never failing:

Our Helper He, amid the flood of mortal ills, preventing!"

Glory hear the battle peal! Ours the joy the victors feel;

Glorious, when for thee we seal.

With life, our consecration!

Women and War.

Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, who was recently sentenced to ten years in prison for sedition and now out on bail, has been nominated by the Socialists for the Assembly from the Tenth district.

Under the new franchise law giving everyone who has lived in Ireland six months, the right to vote, will enable thousands of women to assert their rights with the ballot at the coming elections in that country.

Returning from college and finding her father's deputy in the army, Miss Gerald McCord, of Seymour, Ind., decided to take the job and was immediately sworn in as deputy sheriff to assist her father in his duties.

Mrs. Hazel Drew, of Allston, Mass., has the distinction of being the first woman since the establishment of the British and Canadian recruiting mission in the United States to pass the physical examination for service in the woman's royal air force.

Miss Bessie Townsend, of Atlantic City, has been elected vice president of the National Association of Comptrollers and Accounting Officers. She is the only woman comptroller in the United States, having held this position in her home city for several years.

Generals in the German army are afraid of the influence of women and have therefore banned them from taking any part in the warfare at the front. This is just the opposite of what is allowed by the allies, for they realize the worth of women and allow them to do all kinds of work on the war front.

The Tons You Eat.

The Millennium Guild takes the daily average of half a pound of meat eaten by each inhabitant of the United States and finds that in 50 years the average meat eater consumes four tons and a half, or, to put it in another way, this average person, at the end of 50 years, has eaten enough tons of meat to be the equivalent of 6 beef cattle, 15 calves, 22 sheep, 40 lambs, 10 hogs, 100 turkeys, 200 chickens and ducks, one deer, besides pigeons and small birds a goodly number. What a slaughter-house we have made out of the world! Yet two-thirds of the population of the globe, it is estimated, never eat meat.

Among these latter are millions of sturdy, healthy toilers. We also know that the horse, the ox, the elephant—strongest of our animals, their strength on grasses and cereals.

There are nearly three million adults in the United States who do not speak English, yet the President says we must all speak together. To this end an organization of women, known as the Neighbors' League, asks each American woman to annex one neighbor, to whom she will render the service of teaching the English language, either personally or by proxy.

The Helping Hand—Goldine

Goldine goes right to the seat of the trouble, in cases of chronic, severe and mild attacks of stomach trouble, and in considering the ingredients, which are compounded under the exacting conditions, it seldom fails in bringing great relief to many people. A few among the many simple but nevertheless efficient herbs, berries, barks, etc., used in this preparation are, Life Everlasting, Bear Berries, Dandelion, Celery Seed, Juniper Berries, Red Clover Blossoms, Seven Barks, and Grape Root.

Compounded in the proper way this makes one of the most wonderful nerve tonics, which has, and is today working miracles for troubles considered incurable. Every one knows that the medicine that has helped such severe troubles as neuritis, epilepsy, St. Vitus, and locomotor, can surely do great things in more moderate conditions. To prove to the people of Bellefonte that it is all it claims to be just give it a trial for a reasonable length of time to prove its merits. The efficiency of Goldine is seldom questioned.

Bodies of Dead Soldiers Will be Brought Home.

Washington, September.—Americans who lose their lives in the war abroad will be buried there only temporarily. Where identification is possible the bodies will be placed in marked graves, to be taken up when the war is over and brought home.

This plan of the War Department was disclosed a few days ago by the publication of articles of agreement between the army and navy regarding the transportation of sick and wounded from overseas. A section of the agreement says:

"The remains of all officers, enlisted men and civilian employees who have died or will hereafter die in France will be buried in France until the end of the war, when the remains shall be brought back to the United States for final interment. Such cemeterial facilities as the army may have acquired in France shall be available to the navy. The remains of all officers, enlisted men and civilian employees who die on ships en route to and from the United States, shall be embalmed and returned to
