Found Two Dead Red Foxes.

William Cross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Cross, who lives on the Meek farm in Spring township, got two red foxes on Monday morning and he didn't have to kill them, either. The young man started work early in the morning hauling out manure to one of the back fields of the farm. On his first trip out he saw something lying near the middle of the field and going to investigate was surprised to find two red foxes, lying about ten feet apart, and both of them dead. The one was cold and rigid but the other one was still warm. A close examination failed to disclose any bullet foxes were not killed by hunters, and the cause of their death is somewhat of a mystery. . It is just possible that they may have been poisoned by some person who was anxious to protect his hen roosts, but of course that is merely speculation and is not worrying William very much. He got the the time set by The Pennsylvania foxes, and removed the pelts.
