HUNS PLAYING FOR FAVOR.

How They Are Regarded by American Army of Occupation.

The "Watchman" is in receipt of a brief letter from Major H. R. Cooper, who is now with the headquarters of the 90th division, third army of occupation, stationed at Berncastel, Cues, Germany. Writing under date of February 17th he says:

"One of the things to be most regretted in this war is that each unit didn't have an "Irwin Cobb" attached to write up, as should have been written up, the many incidents-grave, gay, humorous and tragic-that were covered in an official dispatch of about four lines.

"The army of occupation is waiting -we all want to go home-but not until we ought to; and the "ought to" time hasn't come around yet. It's a vey good thing for America as a whole that her army is spending so much time in Germany."

"At first, the sudden transition from trenches, pup-tents and cooties to real beds, warm rooms and regular meals impressed our men, and the Germans were rather felt to be "good people"-better to us than the French. Now our men know better. They are learning, and have learned, that the Hun at home is much the same as he was in the field-a sneaking, lying, contemptible sort of man; ready to take every advantage he can, but more ready to cringe to authority; suave, plausible and very nice to one's face; but how they hate us, and what they call us, when they think we can't hear

"It is my judgment that the army of occupation will go a long way towards keeping public opinion in the U.S.A. in the right direction when it gets home. We don't like the Hun and we never will like 'em."

Confirmation Received of Death of Bugler Frank B. Crissman.

W. Homer Crissman this week received indisputable confirmation of Crissman, in France on October 3rd. an official letter from Lieut. Col. Charles C. Pierce, chief quartermaster U. S. A., which is as follows: American Expeditionary Forces,

Died at Coblenz, Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. George Harnish, of Snow Shoe, have received confirmation of the report of the death of their son, private Lloyd J. Harnish, of lobar pneumonia, which occurred on December 21st while stationed at Coblenz. Germany, with the army of occupation. Mr. and Mrs. Harnish received a message from the War Department a few weeks ago announcing their son's death, but the serial number in the message did not correspond with that of private Harnish and they indulged the hope that a mistake had been made in the name, but now they have received what they cannot help but regard as indisputable proof that it was their son who died. Private Harnish was called for service in July, 1918. He was one of the contingent of 117 men who were given the big patriotic demonstration on Sunday, July 21st, and who left the next day for Camp Lee, Va. The young man trained there until September 15th when he sailed from New York for overseas duty. In France he was assigned to Company K, 28th infantry, First division and although he was not in active service at the front any great length of time, he saw some service and was in the front line when the armistice went into effect on November 11th. But notwithstanding the fact that he died of pneumonia instead of a Hun bullet he gave his life for his country and his share of the glory is no less than that of the man who died on the battle field.

He was buried in a metallic casket in a cemetery at Coblenz, Germany, and his funeral was attended with all the honors of war. Private Harnish was twenty-five the death of his son, bugler Frank B. years old and is survived by his parents and the following brothers and The information came in the shape of sisters: F. C. Harnish, of Snow Shoe; Merle, at home; Mrs. Mitchell of Clarence, and Berenice, at home. One sister, Miss Velma Harnish, died in the Altoona hospital of influenza on December 29th, just eight days after her soldier brother, and without knowing of his death. Private Harnish was a member of the P. O. S. of A., the Red Men and the Lodge of Moose, all of Snow Shoe, and had many friends who mourn his

A GLIMPSE OF CALIFORNIA. Former Centre Countian Writes of Climate, Crops, Etc.

The "Watchman this week will publish the first of a series of four letters written by a former Centre countian who is now in California, and we believe the same will be appreciated by our readers, as they contain incidents and information about life on the Pacific coast that are not generally known. The letters were written by A. C. Wolf to his aunt, Mrs. Julia Carner, of Hublersburg, and for reasons which will become apparent while perusing the letters, they are published under their proper dates:

Mr. Landis, who was about thirtyeight years of age, came to Port Matilda from Mount Union about six months ago and in the brief time he had been in charge at the Superior Silica brick plant he not only made good with his employers but had acquired considerable popularity among the men by his fair and gentlemanly treatment. The above dispels all doubt of Bugler Crissman's fate, notwithstanding the fact that various letters have been received in Bellefonte since the date of his death stating that he was still alive.

As to the exact way in which he was wounded and the incidents connected with his death, they are still unknown, although one story in circulation is that Bugler Crissman and several other military police were returning to their base after convoying a supply train to the front and it was a stray shell that caught him, inflicting the injuries which caused his death within thirty-six hours.

News of the Soldier Boys.

Lieut. Claude W. Smith has been in Bellefonte this week packing and shipping his household goods to Admiral, Md. Lieut. Smith has been stationed at Camp Meade since his visit home last summer and recently he was given a commission in the regular army. As he will be stationed at Camp Meade indefinitely he decided to move his household goods there and establish his home near the camp.

One Bellefonte soldier boy who has served overseas will get the advantage of a four month's college course at Oxford. He is Ferguson Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Ross Parker. Recently the War Department announced that an opportunity would be given seven thousand soldiers of the overseas force to take a four month's course at either the University of Paris or Oxford, but the young men would be selected from those who have had some college training. The selection was made on the basis of a competitive examination and two thousand men were finally chosen. Among the number was Ferguson Parker, who was in his Senior year at State College when he entered the service. The tuition charged for the four month's course is $50.00, but the soldiers' pay goes on. Since going across Ferguson has been attached to at the Lyric theatre. Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Wolf, of Coleville, on Wednesday evening received a telegram from the War Department announcing the death of their son, private Ira I. Wolf, in France on February 22nd, of broncho pneumonia. The young soldier would have been twenty-four years old next September. When in his teens he joined the regular army and served a term of enlistment, having seen service at various places in the States as well as in Panama. His term of enlistment expired and he returned home in time to be called for service in April, 1918. He left Bellefonte on April 29th and went with a national army contingent to Camp Meade where he trained two months, going over in June. He was at first attached to the 305th Motor Supply company but had evidently been transferred as his last letter home gave his address as "Second Provincial Military Police, 2nd Army." Whether he was with the army of occupation or doing duty in France is not known.

The young soldier is survived by his parents, two brothers and two sisters, namely, Clayton, Leslie, Helen and Susanne, all at home.

At the end of the bleaching period they are taken out, dried, packed and shipped to market. (The lemons I sent you were green when picked and you can improve them a great deal by putting them in a tight box or can and leaving them sweat for a week or ten days. Don't put them in tin as they will rust tin or metal of any kind). The seedless oranges you get in the eastern markets in March, April, May and June, are ripe when they are picked. They are known as the Washington naval. Most all other kinds of oranges are treated in the same way as lemons. The almond and English walnut are all bleached with sulphur before shipping which gives the shell the light color it has when bought in the stores. Prunes are first dried then given a bath in hot water and glycerine before being packed for shipment, which gives them their black, glossy color. The fig gets a bath in hot salt water before being packed, which makes the skin nice and tender. Dried fruits of all kinds get a treatment of some description before being marketed. Peaches and apricots are sulphured, that is put in a tight room where sulphur is burned for from four to five hours.

I almost wonder how it would feel to see the lightning flash and hear the heavy rolls of thunder again. I have scarcely heard or seen anything of the kind in seven years. I have slept unand sometimes it was rather cool with them over me. It is most always cool here at night, with the coolest period about five o'clock in the morning. The warmest period during the day is about two o'clock in the afternoon. It is a bad place for colds in the summer time but one rarely gets a cold in the winter period.

California has over 280,000 automobiles and one seldom sees a team of horses on the road. All the hauling is done with trucks. I am living about five hundred feet from the coast-tocoast highway and on Sundays and holidays the machines pass at the rate of forty a minute.

Since the selective service law went into effect there has been very little emigration into California from Mexico. Some of our California marines trained at a camp in Pennsylvania, but I have forgotten the name.

Butter is now selling here at 52 cents a pound; eggs 45 cents a dozen; potatoes 4 cents a pound and beans 20 cents a pound, with everything else correspondingly high.
