The Victory Loan is the "People's Loan," and They Should Buy the Bonds.

The success of the Victory Liberty loan is assured. The terms as announced by Secretary Glass meet with universal approval; the rate of interest, the time, and the tax provisions are such as will appeal to all classes of investors. The allotment for this district is $820,700, and all signs point to an over-subscription.

The average American knows a good thing when he sees it. This is why it was possible to sell sixteen billian dollars of Liberty bonds, and it is why we feel sure that the same success will attend the sale of the Victory loan. "Thanksgiving loan," it should be called, as Secretary Glass has suggested. For we all should offer a devout prayer of thanksgiving because of peace, and because of what we have escaped. Victory means to us freedom from the horrors that Germany will be called upon to endure-a mountain of debt to be paid during many years to other nations. Crushing taxation, a lost merchant marine, a destroyed foreign trade. repudiation of the huge sums loaned to the Imperial government by a deluded people. Financial distress pro- for the Victory Liberty loan. Do not longed for a generation-all these we be content to merely give the ladies a have escaped, and escaped through the use of the force that we were able to exert because of the money furnished by the four Liberty loans.

Shall we hesitate to finish the work? Shall we say that because the war is over, because there is no danger of German domination, we have no interest in the matter? That is not what right thinking people with Pennsylvania turntable was torn out a sense of duty and of honor will say. Rather they will want to prove that it does not require the stimulus of excitement or fear, or the example of spike and tie by tie the road is being other people to show them their duty. And when duty and self-interest are co-incident, when one can feel the sense of duty done, and at the same at Brownsville and moved back to time feel that this duty was done New Kensington. There is an impression in some quarters that the banks should take this loan. This would be bad business for the man who finds it necessary to borrow. Banks have only a certain amount to lend. Should they invest all this amount in government securities how could they lend to keep business going? Such a procedure would mean a calling in of loans, and city. He left for that place the latter a general curtailment of credit that would be very bad for business. Some people seem to think that there is no end to the money that a bank can control. This is the reverse of true. A bank's ability to loan is limited to its resources, and to such a proportion of its resources as not already invested. To put all this fund into government securieies instead of commercial paper would be very bad policy for the public, who in time of need, make it go. The "Watchman" last week told of op reaching here on Monday with three modified DeHaviland planes day afternoon. which they were taking to Cleveland. The three pilots were obliged to stay in Bellefonte all week owing to the rain and cloudy weather. Saturday morning dawned fair and bright and was an ideal day for flying and the birdmen got ready to fly to Cleveland. The start was made at exactly ten o'clock and the three machines left the aviation field in quick succession eral of Mrs. Melissa Bing, in Unionville. and took to the air. They circled several times over Bellefonte until they had attained an altitude of from six to seven thousand feet then gradually rising took a course due west, flying in a V shape with Miller in the lead.

The latter was up about eight thousand feet and had reached a point almost over Unionville when there was a sudden crack and his motor stopped dead. At the same time he saw a tongue of flame shoot out from his motor jacket. Realizing that prompt action was necessary he shut off his gasoline supply then took a nose dive in the hope that the rush of wind would extinguish the flames. He dropped about two thousand feet at an estimated speed of two hundred miles an hour and then brought his plane to normal again, only to discover that while the fire was gone he was so enveloped in a cloud of smoke from the burning oil that he could not see of a thousand feet or more which J. A. Aikens. Miss Johnston came to brought him into the clear atmosphere and then he began to volplane and looked all right and he headed for it, but when he got nearer to it he saw it was rough but right beyond it was a field which looked like a nice grass field and he had momentum sufficient ground at one end of the field but was going at such speed that he ran al- Mrs. Willard Hall, indefinitely. most the full length of the field and he least, only a faintly-outlined track being discernible where the airplane crossed through the field. Pilot Miller was not even shaken up by the accident or landing and brought the plane down without breaking a thing but a brief examination showed him that the motor was in bad shape due to the accident up in the air, whatever the cause. In the meantime the two other pilots had been witnesses of Miller's mishap and they circled around to see what the outcome would be but as soon as he was safe on land he waved his cap to them that he was all right and they were to go ahead, which they did, landing all right in Cleveland Saturday afternoon.

As quickly as possible Miller got to a telephone and called the Bellefonte aviation field and told of his accident, and also that he was safe and sound. An automobile was sent after him and he was brought back to Bellefonte. He reached here about twelve o'clock and with his grip in his hand walked into the Brockerhoff house as unconcerned as if accidents in the air were a very ordinary thing, asked if luncheon was ready and on being told that it was calmly proceeded to the dining room and ate a good meal, none the
