Ralph Snyder, of Lulu, Florida, made his sister, Mrs. W. T. Kunes, a much appreciated visit, arriving on Thursday of last week, and leaving on Tuesday, in order to stop off at Washington, D. C., on his way home. Mrs. Annie Lucas, formerly of this place, but now located at Rockview, was a pleasant visitor among her friends for a short time, later leaving for Snow Shoe to visit her son, Claude Lucas, who is suffering with a severe attack of rheumatism.

The Ladies Aid held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Sallie Friel, on Thursday afternoon of last week, with only six members present on account of the inclement weather, but an enjoyable meeting ensued and after the business was completed refreshments were served by Mrs. Friel, after which adjournment was in order. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Lew Fetzter.

APACHE INDIANS BELIEVE SPIRIT OF CHIEF'S DAUGHTER IMPARTS TALISMANIC POWER TO STONES.

There is a garnet mine in Arizona so rich in gems that the owners sometimes say the whole mountain in which it is located is a mountain of garnets. The Apache Indians, near whose reservation the mountain stands, have a strange myth concerning the garnets. One night centuries ago, they say, the little daughter of a great chief died. As her spirit passed out, the Indians gathered about saw a multitude of sparks fly up from the tepee and drifting through the air in a shining cloud settle on the mountain side, where they shone like star dust, making the mountain bright. Later, they declare, the sparks which continued to shine, never growing cold or dead, sank into the earth and became garnets.

The Indians believe that the spirit of the chief's daughter still stands guard over the mountain and imparts to all the garnets found there talismanic powers to bring good luck to all who wear them. These garnets are mined now and sold all over the country in rings, necklaces and bracelets for pale-face maids. Many of the garnet rings are made in swastika design—the Indian good-luck sign—and any who happen to buy one may be sure of prosperous fortune ever afterward.

Marriage Customs in the Sudan. In "Sudan Notes and Records," Mr. W. Nicholls describes a remarkable marriage custom in the Sennar province which is known as "stealing the fire." On the final night of the festivities the bridegroom goes to the bride's house escorted by a band of youths bearing torches. These torches can be lit only by fire taken from the bride's house, and this the relatives of the bride take every possible method to prevent. Some of the bridegroom's friends creep in secretly at night, or a body of them forces its way into the house to carry off the fire. The editor quotes as parallels the custom recorded by Sir James Frazer ("The Golden Bough," "The Magic Art," vol. II, pp. 216-220), in which fire is used as a fertility charm in marriage ritual. But this is not an exact parallel, and, assuming that the charm is in the interest of the bride, it does not account for the resistance made by her friends when the bridegroom's party endeavors to procure fire from her home hearth.

Getting the Most Out of Life. With the growing mind the minutes pass unnoticed. To the stirring soul life is so full of action that the minutes count only in the total of achievement. For the man of action there is no time for dragging hours. Every minute has its task, and all too fast fly the hours—the minutes scarcely have existence. It is different with the laggard. He waits the passing of time. And time waited for seldom gratifies the loafer. To prove time's worth you have only to crowd the minutes with worth-while efforts and, before you are ready for it, the gong will ring. And every minute well spent lures the toiler into new realms of effort, shortening the minutes and adding to their charm.—Grit.

Night Sweating Stopped. Jonathan Sallada, 450 Hepburn St., Williamsport, Pa., says: "Since early boyhood I have suffered from night sweating. It caused me a great deal of annoyance. It became more persistent the older I grew and the weaker I became. Some nights I could hardly sleep at all. I would get up in the morning feeling more exhausted than when I went to bed. I got a bottle of Goldine at Kolb Bros. drug store and before that bottle was gone I felt much better. I am stronger, sleep better and do not sweat nights as I did. It certainly did more for me than anything I have ever taken, and I can recommend it to any one for I have proven its value. For sale by Green's Pharmacy, 64-19.

Fix Up. The long war made us sick and faint, we had no heart to hump; and so alas, we did not paint the cowshed as the pump; we read long tales of bones and woe, and let our chores to thunder go, and now our houses look as though they should be at the dump. We had no heart to trim the trees, or bear dead cats away, when mighty lemons, o'er the seas, engaged in bloody fray; and while those legions thundered on the lawn swing and garden gate; we merely stood and railed at fate, and cussed the submarine. Now in a castele queer and quaint the mildewed Kaiser sits; and we should buy some rich red paint, and throw some clean-up fits; for kalsomine of gaudy hue, to make the shack look good as new, for clover seed and blue grass, too, we ought to blow six hits. We've talked of war a weary while, of admirals and kings; now let's put on our peace time smile, and think of other things, let's fix the roof before there's rain, replace the broken window pane; a lot of duties in its train this smiling season brings.—Walt Mason in Ex.

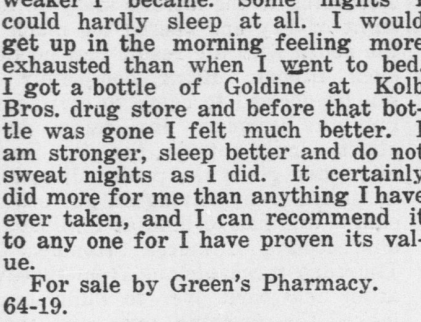

The Situation. "Bruder Simms," said the new pastor, "how would de congregation stand on de question o' givin' one tent' o' dere income to s'port de preachah?" "I don't b'lieve dey'd stand on it," replied Brother Simms. "Dey'd jump on it wid bot' feet."

Not That One. "Lend you a hundred? Why, man, you must have lost your senses." "Not all of them. I've still got de sense of touch, you see."

His Favorite. She—Are you fond of animals, Mr. Smiley? He—Well, I like spring lamb.

Gratitude.

"Here, poor man, is a penny for you." "Thank you, mum; I'll always number you among my closest friends."
