Mr. James R. Hughes, of the Bellefonte Academy, was honored this week by receiving an invitation for a reception to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker, of New York, to His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, in the Seventh regiment army, N. Y., this (Friday) evening. Mr. Hughes and Mr. Wanamaker were classmates at Princeton college, and while the former was compelled to send his regrets at not being able to accept the invitation he very much appreciates the spirit of loyalty to a fellow classmate in which it was sent. Mr. Hughes is probably the only Bellefonter to be so honored.

BELLEFONTE HANGAR BURNED.

Entire Plant Went Up in Smoke Entailing Loss of $200,000. New Steel Building to Take Its Place.

The air-drome on the U. S. government aviation field in Bellefonte was entirely destroyed by fire on Saturday evening together with all its contents which included four DeHaviland airplanes, three of them new; a Curtiss plane that had just been received and never flown; three new Liberty motors that had never been used; all the spare parts in the stock room; a big White truck, two motor cycles with side cars; all the office equipment, and various personal belongings of the aviators and men employed on the field, entailing a loss roughly estimated at $200,000, although the exact amount cannot be definitely told as all the records of stock on hand, etc., were burned.

The fire started shortly after 5:30 o'clock and so fiercely did it burn that everything available was reduced to ashes in half an hour, but the ground on which the building stood, and it likely would have burned, too, had it been composed of combustible material. The only man on the field when the fire started was the watchman, Charles From. He had gone to one end of the air-drome to punch the time clock on his regular round and smell of smoke.

He hastily investigated but found nothing wrong in that end of the building. He went through the building but failed to discover any fire until he entered the office when he saw flames in the stock room over the office. He promptly grabbed a pyrene fire extinguisher and running up the stairs to the stock room directed the chemical upon the flames. By that time, however, the fire had eaten through the thin board partition separating the office and stock room from the main part of the building and all the efforts of Mr. From failed to check the flames. In a very few minutes the wings of the plane nearest the office caught fire and they burned almost like tinder. Mr. From then sent in a fire alarm but while the firemen rushed to the aviation field it was useless to take along their fire-fighting apparatus, as there is no available water supply within reach of the field. The flames quickly spread from plane to plane and as the gasoline tank of each one exploded the flames would shoot in the air fifty feet or more.

Now it just happened that on Wednesday of last week field manager Herbert Blakesley had received an order transferring him to Bustleton and Ferdinand Widsen was named as his successor. Mr. Blakesley had not yet left Bellefonte and at the first alarm of the fire he and Mr. Widsen and practically all the force employed at the field, as well as the flyers, hurried to the field and although it was too late to save anything in the burning structure there were a dozen or more barrels of gasoline standing at the end of the building and the gasoline pump house stood only a short distance away. Putting into service the big White car water was hauled to the field from the Beaver farm and although the metal gasoline barrels were already steaming hot they were partially cooled with a douche of water when each in turn was grabbed by some of the field employees and rolled out onto the road to a place of safety. It was dangerous work and spectators tried to keep the men from endangering their lives but they stuck to it until every barrel was saved then turned their attention to saving the gasoline pump house. In this they were also successful, but as it was the roof of the building was badly charred. It was extremely dangerous work but every man did his duty valiantly and some of them even shed tears over the fact that they couldn't save more. Of the aviators Ellis was probably the most affected of all to see his ship burn, as it was one he has flown ever since he has been on the mail route and he had a wondrously friendly feeling for it.

Most of the aviators lost their heavy leather coats and other effects. Maurice Kelly lost a typewriter and a multiple telegraph key. Carpenter George Eberhart had been doing some work at the field and had his box of tools in the building, and those were also destroyed. He estimates his loss at one hundred dollars. Hardly had the building been burned to the ground until Mr. Blakesley got busy on the telephone, got the field at Mineola and also Cleveland and asked that a machine be sent here from each place, and both came in on Sunday. He also secured an office which the State Highway Department had been using in Buffalo Run valley and bright and early Sunday morning it was taken down in sections and transferred to the field. Carpenters and electricians were busy all day and by evening the office was in shape, equipped with telegraph and telephone instruments, electric light and a borrowed typewriter and requisition had been made out for the various supplies and stock needed. A machine shop had also been erected.

A new steel hangar furnished by the department will be erected to take the place of the one destroyed by fire, and another such catastrophe will thus be avoided. The only way the fire can be accounted for is that it must have caught from the stovepipe leading from the stove in the office up through the stockroom. While it is a big loss, and one that no human agency could avert, every man connected with the service, from Mr. Blakesley, Mr. Widsen and the flyers to the watchman on the field displayed the utmost loyalty to the government in doing their best to save what they could.

Superintendent Stanton, of the eastern district of the aerial mail service and field inspector Egge, of Washington, were here on Tuesday and after looking over the ruins caused by the disastrous fire approved the requisition for a steel hangar 100x66 feet in size, which will mean about two hundred square feet more floor space than the old hangar. The citizens of the town, through Robert F. Hunter, acting for the board of trade, tendered the Department the services of fifty men, or the equivalent thereof, to assist in the erection of the hangar when it arrives, and the offer was accepted, though in doing so the Department stated that the present plans were to put larger machines on the New York to Chicago route with the idea of only one regular stop, that at Cleveland, Ohio. But the Bellefonte field will be maintained as an emergency and supply station for the fliers when they feel the necessity of coming down for either oil or gas or repairs to their machine.

As to the radio station now almost completed on the Bellefonte field, it will be put in operation and used as a guide to the fliers in cloudy and foggy weather, and it is said that under the system being installed and with the equipment to be carried by the planes, flyers can get their exact location at any time and will be able to land safely on a field without seeing the ground.

Of course, until the big mail carrying machines are installed Bellefonte will be a regular stop as it has been in the past, and in the event the flight from New York to Cleveland proves too strenuous for the endurance of the aviators then the Bellefonte field will be in shape for regular stops as it has been in the past. Of course two or more emergency planes will always be kept here in case they are needed.

OTHER FIRES SUNDAY AND MONDAY. Bellefonters have always been more or less superstitious about fires and invariably when one occurs look for two more, but on this occasion they got more than they counted on, though fortunately all the others were of small loss. The first was shortly after midnight Saturday night when fire was discovered on the roof of the Hamilton house on Howard street. It was quickly extinguished, however, before doing much damage and without sending in an alarm.

Sunday evening about seven o'clock another fire was discovered on the roof of the W. Miles Walker home on east Linn street. An alarm was promptly sent in but fortunately the flames were extinguished before the firemen reached the scene.

Then about 9:30 o'clock on Monday morning another alarm summoned the firemen to the Bellefonte Academy where a fire had broken out in the basement of the small L on the west side of the building. This fire, too, was extinguished before it gained any great headway, and the loss to the Academy will not be over $150.00 or $200.00. The origin of this fire is a mystery, as the only thing in the basement where the fire started was a few empty boxes and some waste paper. Mr. Hughes is inclined to the belief that the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion. At first it looked very threatening and the students threw clothing and suit cases out of their rooms to the ground below and had even carried out some of the furniture on the first floor of the building.

Mr. Hughes Speaks a Good Word for Firemen.

Dear Mr. Editor:— I wish to thank the members of the Logan and Undine fire companies, through the columns of your paper, for the remarkably prompt response on their part to the call for help at the Academy fire last Monday morning. I have never witnessed quicker nor more successful action by our firemen. It certainly prevented a most destructive conflagration.

When volunteer firemen are expected to leave their offices, counting rooms and workshops at a moment's notice, they should not be encumbered by inadequate equipment. They should have the very best placed at their command. They have made the matter of fire apparatus a close study and should know what they need and desire. There is no economy in cheap apparatus. We have valuable properties in Bellefonte. The closing down of the steam heat plant has increased the menace of fire because of the large number of individual heating plants recently installed. Increase the fire protection, and you decrease the menace of disastrous fires and lower the rates of insurance.

Very respectfully, JAMES R. HUGHES.

Mrs. Delmonico, who will open an art shop in the Shoemaker flats tomorrow, Nov. 22, with a full line of art work, will also teach embroidery, crocheting and stamping. Consult her in all kinds of fancy work. 46-11

While hunting squirrels on the Seven mountains one day last week Harry Miller, of Boalsburg, shot a wild cat which measured four feet and ten inches from the tip of the nose to the tip of the tail. It was one of the biggest bob cats ever killed in that section, and Mr. Miller will likely have the skin mounted and preserve it as a memento of his hunter's skill.

Clyde Williams, of Port Matilda, is in the Bellefonte hospital with a broken ankle sustained in an auto accident last Friday, when the machine which he was driving from Port Matilda to Julian ran into a ditch and overturned, owing to a broken steering gear.

Mrs. Sparks Elected State Regent of D. A. R.

Mrs. Edwin Erie Sparks, of State College, was elected State Regent of the D. A. R. at the twenty-third annual meeting of the organization in Pittsburgh last week over Mrs. H. Grant Dreisbach, of Lewisburg, by a vote of 213 to 154. The voting took place Friday and the result was announced at the annual banquet held at the William Penn hotel on Friday evening.

The contest for the highest office in the organization was probably the hottest waged in some years within the confines of that organization. Mrs. Sparks was championed by the Bellefonte Chapter and aside from the local chapter her strength was in the eastern and western sections of the State. Mrs. Dreisbach drew the bulk of her support from the north-central part of the State. Both candidates had loyal bands of supporters and it is said that the virtues and qualifications of each one was hurled back and forth throughout the meeting hall in a way that very much resembled an old-time political convention.

As a matter of local interest it might be stated that Mrs. Sparks' name was presented to the conference by Mrs. E. H. B. Callaway, of Bellefonte. One of the tellers to take up the ballots was Mrs. A. W. Smith, of Blairsville, but formerly of Stormstown, this county, who took a very active part in all the proceedings of the conference. The other officers elected in addition to Mrs. Sparks were as follows:

Vice regent, Mrs. John Brown Heron, of Pittsburgh; State historian, Mrs. N. Howard Brown, of Valley Forge Chapter, Norristown; State librarian, Mrs. George H. Stewart, Shippensburg; three State directors were elected, viz.: Eastern district, Miss Elizabeth Getts, regent of the Donegal chapter, Lancaster; Central district, Mrs. Clarence G. Crispin, regent of Moses Vancampen chapter, Berwick; West district, Mrs. Samuel G. Rumbine, regent of Canadota chapter, Titusville.

The result of the election Thursday was not only a great compliment to Mrs. Sparks, but also to the Bellefonte Chapter, inasmuch as this is their third State Regent within a few years; Mrs. W. F. Reeder, now of California, being the first, and Miss Helen E. C. Overton, of Bellefonte, the second. Miss Overton had further honors conferred upon her by being made honorary regent, when leaving the office at the expiration of her term.

Twenty-four Liquor License Applications Filed for 1920.

Down in Kentucky the judges declare war time prohibition now unconstitutional and whiskey is being sold to any one and every one who can put up the stiff price of seventy-five dollars a case of twelve quart bottles, and they are likely short quarts at that. In Chicago and New York the judges declare the law is good and can be enforced, and between the two decisions the average landlord is in a quandary and don't know what to do. But there are twenty-four men in Centre county who don't intend to be caught napping because just that number of applications have been filed for liquor license for the year beginning April 1st, 1920.

Under a ruling by Judge Quigley license court in Centre county is held on the first Saturday after the first Monday in December, and as the law requires all applications to be filed at least twenty days before court last Saturday was the last day for filing in Centre county and the list was just twenty-four. All but one of the above number are landlords, wholesalers and the Phillipsburg brewery who have kept their old license good by the payment of the license fee monthly or every three months, as the case may be. The new application is from the present landlord of the Spring Mills hotel.

Four applications have been filed by landlords of Bellefonte, no application being filed by landlord H. S. Ray, of the Brockerhoff house. Mr. Ray dropped his old license several months ago and decided it was not worth while taking chances on the constitutional prohibition being declared unconstitutional to make application for a license next year.

Very Few Wild Turkeys Shot on Opening Day.

Contrary to general expectations very few wild turkeys were killed in Centre county last Saturday, the opening day of the season. Not one of the birds was brought in by Bellefonte hunters, although a few were seen, but at such a distance away that they were out of range.

It is reported that two sons of G. F. Fink, of Huston township, each got a turkey and that several were shot in the neighborhood of Unionville and several by Pennsylvanians hunters, but the total number bagged in the county was very small and no comparison to the kill on the opening day in former years when anywhere from twenty-five to fifty turkeys would be brought in the first day of the season.

A report has been current this week that some unknown hunter ran into a flock of turkeys on the mountain above Fillmore last week, before the season opened, and killed some of the birds, leaving two dead ones lie on the ground where they fell. Just how much truth there is in the report the writer is unable to say, but the story is worth investigation on the part of some enterprising game warden and if true, and the guilty parties located, they should be made to pay the penalty.

The young man is twenty years old, was a private in France where he was gassed with the result that his affliction is given as "short of breath and loss of voice." Mr. Hughes takes it as a compliment to the thorough training given the boys at the Academy that his institution has been selected by the federal government as a good place to train the boys who have been incapacitated in the service of their country.

Work on an official history of the students and alumni of The Pennsylvania State College who served in the world war is now well under way. It is being compiled by the alumni secretary, E. W. Sullivan, and some idea may be had of the job it will be from the fact that Mr. Sullivan has already compiled a list of approximately 3800 men who served in some branch of the service. Of the above number only sixty-five lost their lives in service. A summary of the records show that two college men attained the rank of colonel, seven lieutenant colonel, twenty-eight major, ninety-eight captain, and about six hundred first and second lieutenant.
