-A sixteen year old youth by the name of James Motter was arrested in Bellefonte Wednesday morning by policeman Robinson on the charge of stealing a Franklin Sedan from the Sweet Motor company, Lock Haven. The same afternoon officer "Dad" Meyers came to Bellefonte and took the young man back to Lock Haven.

-"Smiling" Bobby Jones opened her three night's engagement at the opera house last night and those who saw the show speak very highly of it. "Smiling" Bobby captured the audience at once and while she is a cleve: little star she has surrounded herself with a very capable company. The stage settings are superb and the plays are worth seeing.

-The "Watchman's" Pleasant Gap correspondent exemplifies his versatility this week with an article entitled, "A Sermon on Corns." We call attention to it because of the fact that his "sermon" is based on "a very prepossessing lady" he saw walking on the streets of Bellefonte one day recently and it is quite evident that the correspondent is of a very observing nature. But we'll wager our last year's hat that nobody can guess who the young lady was.

-Miss Agnes Lingle, of Spring Mills, is in the Lewistown hospital with her right leg broken and suffering other injuries as the result of an automobile accident on Long Mountain bridge, in the Seven mountains, on Tuesday evening. Miss Lingle was a member of an auto party from Spring Mills, the driver being Lucien Snyder. Their car went over the same bridge where the Krape girl, of Potters Mills, was killed less than a year ago. Snyder escaped with minor injuries and an eight year old boy, asleep on the rear seat of the car, was not even wakened by the fall of the short talk on the modern health crucar. When the water began to close around him he opened his eyes in Dr. Kinneman talked on progress as Big Attendance at Annual Institute Held in the Court House.

A very large percentage of the two hundred and seventy-five school teachers so far listed in Centre county enrolled for the opening session of the seventy-fourth annual teachers' institute on Monday. It was just 2:05 o'clock in the afternoon when the institute opened with the singing of one stanza of "America" followed with nesday. the song "Joy to the World." Rev. E. J. Dunn led in the devotional exercises after which Rev. E. C. Keboch, Methodist minister of Harrisburg, who has very ably filled the position of musical director of the institute, gave a short talk on the advantages of singing in the public schools.

County superintendent David O. Etters addressed the institute briefly, explaining why it was considered advisable to have the institute at this time instead of during the school term. He also asked the teachers to give especial attention to the talk of W. M. Denison, on school attendance. The first speaker introduced was Dr. A. J. Kinneman, of Bowling Green, Teacher." Illustrating his subject he band. took the rural teacher, who is not one of the community, and in contrast described the teacher who is bigger than the four walls of his school house. He gets outside, becoming a leader industrially, socially, religiously and morpupils but the entire community. The teacher has the opportunity to assist community life. Take a big heart in going into a school community and bring comfort and good will to the patrons as well as the pupils, then you will not be the unknown teacher but the useful teacher. The next instructor introduced was Miss Nellie E. Turner, of Tidioute, Pa., who talked on reading in the grades above the primary. Miss Turner said we cannot build a method on interest, on imagination, or on spirit. It must be on facts. There are problems to be gotten out in reading the same as in other branches of study. She illustrated her meaning by explanatory talks on various sentences showing how to create the pupils' interest in the subject matter and thus make of reading an interesting study instead of a perfunctory performance. She also urged the teachers to see that their pupils while reading stood on two feet, in an upright position, and not lagging on one foot.

Tuesday morning's session was open-Alexander Scott and after a short musical session John Payne, who has oversight over the vocation school work in Centre county, was introducwith your old magazines and period- ed and talked briefly on the intents and purposes of the vocational school. He stated that the vocational school was started as an experiment in 1913, when five of them were located in different localities of the State, and he twelve years every child in the State will have educational advantages twelve months in the year, the summer months being devoted to active vocational work. At present many High schools have vocational departments. Mr. Pavne advocated the consolidation or centralization of schools as a means of securing better working results.

Following the singing of the "Old Folks at Home," Miss Turner reviewed the work of Monday afternoon in regard to reading.

TUESDAY SESSIONS.

Dr. Kinneman's talk on Tuesday was on the school theory and practice. He said that the way a teacher performs in the school room is determined to a large extend by the attitude of mind of the teacher. The absolutely necessary factors to a school are teacher and pupil, and organization. The school is the spiritual organization of pupil and teacher for the learning, development, progress and enlargement of the one under the direction of the other. The teacher does not send thought over into the pupil's storehouses, but present and interpret signs and symbols so that the children may understand and grow into good and useful men and women. Miss Turner occupied the first period of Tuesday afternoon, explaining and illustrating the use of connecting words in reading, such as "and," "or,' "but" and "if." By an understanding part of the teacher the pupil can be made to see why emphasis is placed Dr. Kinneman's afternoon talk was on which way are we going? Illustrating the meaning of his subject he said that each generation must make some progress; master the achievements of previous generations then add its

WEDNESDAY'S WORK.

On Wednesday morning superintendent M. F. Jones, of Wellsboro, Tioga county, talked on thrift. The big thing in the teaching of thrift is the development of the right character in the child. He told of two schools he had visited, one a model of neatness in every way, which showed thrift in all its phases. The other one just the reverse. He advocated making the school a business proposition, where everything is done in the best way, promptly and cheerfully. Miss Elizabeth B. Meek gave a sade and following a period of music day afternoon. Wednesday afternoon | ing given last week.

COUNTY TEACHERS HERE THIS Dr. Kinneman talked on management in the school room. In addition to the regular instructors yesterday Dr. J. L. Seibert, of Bellefonte, addressed the institute briefly on health work in the schools. The institute will close with this (Friday) morning's session.

The painting was from the Philadelphia studio of Antrim & Landsy, and while these well known artists are celebrated for their fine pictures, either in oil or pastel, the painting of Mr. Chambers is so true to life and realistic that those who have seen it felt almost as if they were standing face to face with Davy.

-Owing to the fact that the registrar at State College has this year been compelled to refuse admission to about one thousand young men and women, friends of the College have already started a movement to bring before the next Legislature the question of the enlargement of that institution to such an extent that it will be able to meet all demands made upon it. To do this will require a number of new buildings and consequently require a very liberal appro- landing in one of the Junker planes in coming here to join his wife, who has priation upon the part of the next Legislature.

The big bus went over the logs but it was with a jolt that sent the passengers bumping against the roof. Who put the logs across the road, or what the object was in doing so, is of course unknown.

> -Building state highways these days, with the wages and scarcity of labor is no cinch of a job. Take the little contract in Bellefonte borough. The work has been dragging along all summer and as it looks now the job will not be completed this year. In fact the concreting on Bishop street is not yet done, and it will probably be several weeks yet before that small stretch of road is thrown open to the public. Of course the contractor was held up in his work by the sewers that had to be put down by the borough, but the shortage of labor has been one of the biggest drawbacks.

The International Engineering and Construction company, of Scranton, began last week on the pouring of the top dressing on the Bellefonte to Pleasant Gap State highway. The dressing is a mixture of small stone, cement, sand and asphaltam. When rolled it becomes very hard and smooth and Bellefonte kiddies were is an ideal place for roller skating. PILOT MAX MILLER KILLED.

Crashed to Earth in a Burning Junker Plane.

Max Miller, one of the most expert pilots in the government aerial service and who was so well known in Bellefonte, met a tragic death at Morristown, N. J., on Wednesday morning when the Junker plane he was driving caught fire and crashed to the ground on one of the main streets of Morristown, instantly killing the pilot and his mechanician, a young man named place.

Rierson, of Troy, Idaho.
Pilot Miller left Hazelhurst field, New York, about six o'clock on Wednesday morning with a cargo of mail for Chicago. According to the story of residents in the neighborhood of Morristown, N. J., he was flying comparatively low and seemed to be having trouble with the motor, as the sounds of considerable back-firing were heard by the people below. Then in an instant the plane burst into flames and almost simultaneously it streets. Both the wing gas tanks ex- school. ploded and the wings of the plane and the mail bags shot up in the air a Meek and two sons, Peter and George, Jr., hundred feet.

Miller and his mechanician were buried beneath the wreckage, and there was just enough of fire to burn their clothing and disfigure the faces of both so that they were unrecognizable, but communication with the government field at Hazelhurst established the identity of the men beyond question.

Quite naturally everybody in Bellefonte was shocked to hear of the tragic death of pilot Miller. To him belonged the credit of establishing the aviation field in Bellefonte. It will be recalled that Mr. Miller was the pathfinder for the Wilson aerial mail route from New York to Chicago. Lock Haven was originally scheduled as the landing place in this part of the State but after Mr. Miller tried out both Lock Haven and Bellefonte he unhesitatingly recommended the Bellefonte field as the better place. This was two years ago and ever since, especially since the establishment of the aerial service sixteen months ago pilot made their short stay with them one Miller has been closely identified with Bellefonte people.

He was one of the best pilots in the aerial mail service, a fact demonsummer he safely brought his plane part of last week, but at his home in that to earth a short distance north of Unionville when it caught fire in midair. At that time he made a nose dive of a wrecked motor. Only two weeks ago operation for appendicitis. he had another thrilling escape when machine between two trees and, while tember 17th when both he and his wife the wings were ripped off and the some logs over the Nittany valley plane almost demolished, Miller escaped without a scratch. He was a pilot who never lost his friends here that when his plane became enveloped in flames on Wednesday both Miller and his mechanician and they didn't have a chance to save themselves or the plane.

Miller, who was about thirty-two years old, was a native of Stockholm, Sweden where his mother still lives. Mr. Miller's wife lives in Washing-tomorrow. while the Watchman doesn't wish to intimate that there is anything faulty in the construction of the Junker planes, it is rather a significant coincidence that on Tuesday W. L. Smith's plane caught fire just as he was landing in Chicago. Fortunately he got down all right, though his hands and face were slightly burned.

A Special Return Train for the Labor Day Celebration at Snow Shoe.

The promotors of the big celebration that Snow Shoe is staging for next Monday, Labor Day, are going to make it as convenient as possible for people on this side to get back home after the joys of the good times that
