Rev. M. DeP. Maynard, Rector.
New Pontificate Ruler Elected.

Rome, Feb. 6.—Cardinal Achille Ratti, archbishop of Milan, has been chosen supreme pontiff of the Roman Catholic church to succeed the late Pope Benedict XV. His coronation as Pius XI will take place February 12. After the announcement of his election the Pope appeared on the outside balcony of St. Peter's and bestowed the benediction on the thousands who had waited patiently in the rain in St. Peter's square—the first time this has occurred since the breach between the State and the church in 1870; for 52 years the blessing had been bestowed from within the Basilica.

The election was completed without American participation in the conclave, Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, arriving at the moment the new Pope was blessing the multitude. Cardinal Achille Ratti, Archbishop of Milan, was for several years Papal Nuncio in Poland, where his discharge of important ecclesiastical functions when the Polish question became acute earned for him the esteem of Benedict XV and the gratitude of Vatican authorities. It was because of this service that the red hat was conferred upon him on June 16, 1921, when a similar honor was bestowed on Cardinal Laurenti.

Cardinal Ratti was born in Italy on October 12, 1858. For many years he was librarian of the Ambrosian Library and archives of Milan. Later he became librarian of the Vatican. In this position he remained until the new republic of Poland established official diplomatic relations with the Vatican, at which time Ratti was appointed archbishop and was assigned to Poland as the representative of the Holy See.

LEAD POISONING.

For some years those whose work had to do with lead suffered severely from poisoning which was supposed to be due to absorption through the hands or through the lungs of fine particles that found their way into the work room. Of more recent years, however, experiments have shown that when the hands were carefully washed no lead could be found around the nails, though without such washing abundant traces of it were there and were evidently transferred to the food and swallowed directly. It seemed at first as though this explanation of most of the cases of lead poisoning was entirely too simple, but washing the hands has saved more men from becoming victims of the disease than any measure that was ever introduced.

This discovery may well show the desirability of washing the hands before meals, whatever a person's occupation may be. Many people dip their hands in water, rubbing soap over them, and then wash it off. This is not the sort of cleansing that is effective for protective purposes against microbic agencies that may be gathered on the hands. This is not the way surgeons wash their hands in order to avoid infecting the patients on whom they are operating. They wash for five minutes with the watch and are rather careful to do it under running water. It has been demonstrated that washing in a single water, no matter how long the washing is done, is likely to leave microbes on the hands. The towel will not remove them. There should be at least three changes of water, or else, better still, the water should be constantly running, removing all the detritus washed from the hands and supplying fresh water constantly.

Ducks in China.

There are more ducks in China than in all the rest of the world. Their voices are a familiar sound in every town and country spot of the sea coast, and the interior of the vast Empire. Even in the large cities ducks abound. They dodge between the coolies' legs. They flit, squawking out of the way of horses. Their indignant quack will not unseldom drown the roar of urban commerce. Children herd ducks on every road, on every pond, on every farm, on every lake, on every river. There is no back yard without its duck quarters. All over the land there are great duck hatcheries, many of them of enormous capacity huge enough to produce fifty thousand young ducks each year. Duck among the Chinese is a staple delicacy. It is salted and smoked like ham or beef. It is served as a delicacy prepared in many ways, and a number of travelers declare only the Chinese know how to cook and serve a nice, fat duck.

In royal households, and among the very wealthy, the duck is served in a particular style in honor of any distinguished guests, and those fortunate enough to be invited.

A BASKETFULL OF EYES IS RUINED YEARLY BY CARELESSNESS.

Some people would take a chance at cutting their own hair if they thought their friends wouldn't get next. This may cause you to smile, but the fact remains that many eyes are ruined yearly by people trying to be their own optometrists, thinking to save money. Service is entirely overlooked by these people, who are willing to save a little now and lose much later on.

If in Doubt About Your Eyes Consult Me.

Have It Welded!

Some people do not believe in acetylene welding, but we can hardly blame them as the class of work they have been getting and the price charged would give most any one the same opinion. We guarantee our work and our prices are right. Bring in those broken pieces you have laying around and we will convince you it pays to have them welded.
