The Misses Lyon intend occupying that part of their home, moving there from Miss Emily Valentine's home on Curtin street.

-It may be out of season but fishing in Spring creek yesterday afternoon was very good. A short time before the "Watchman" went to press the writer's attention was attracted to a young man out in the middle of the creek opposite this office. He had neither rod nor line but was diligently poking away at something on the bed of the creek with a stick. -Notwithstanding the fact that his duties as headmaster of the Bellefonte Academy are quite onerous James R. Hughes finds time occasionally to go to the public schools of Bellefonte to give readings. Julius Ceasar is one of his favorites, while another is the dialect stories of Lawrence Dunbar. Mr. Hughes enjoys this diversion from his regular work at the Academy and gives these readings without any thought of remuneration. The fact that they are appreciated is very gratifying to him.

Farmers Need Not Pay Extra

License Fee.

Several weeks ago the "Watchman' published a digest of a ruling received from the State Highway Department by justice of the peace S. Kline Woodring, of Bellefonte, in which it was stated that farmers and others pay the additional five dollars requirposes. But now it appears that the Department has reversed itself, according to a statement sent out from Harrisburg on Saturday which says:

Farmers who use their flivvers to haul truck to market don't have to pay a commercial vehicle license fee. Acting State Highway Commissioner Biles announced today. This contention was the basis for a new ruling issued this week by the Highway De-partment to clarify a misunderstandng concerning the motor vehicle laws. Through the misunderstanding farmers in a number of sections of the State were led to believe that when and junior departments of the Sunday they used their passenger car to haul truck to market once or twice a week to sit with his or her class. Every it was classed as a commercial vehicle. On the smallest type passenger cars this meant an additional license fee of $5, making the minimum $15 instead of $10. Many farmers protested to the Highway Department.

Under the Highway Department ruling passenger cars "used only at intervals for carrying goods, wares or merchandise" do not come within the scope of the commercial truck class. The above seems perfectly clear and understandable, but how about those farmers who have already paid the additional fee in the belief that they were liable according to former rulings of the Department. Will they have their money refunded?
