An old fashioned barn raising was held on the Samuel Hess farm on the Branch on Monday. The structure is an addition of 38x50 feet to his old barn and so complete had the timbers been framed by contractor Breon, of Bellefonte, that there was not a hitch in the raising. When the job was completed a big supper was served by the ladies present.

During an electric storm that pass-ed over the western end of the county last week lightning struck one of the virgin oak trees standing near the barn on the old John Porter Ly-on farm, shattering it from the top to the ground. Carpenters were engag-ed in making repairs to the barn and the stroke knocked the hatchet out of Ben Everhart's hands and shocked John Quinn and B. Fisher, but not
