

THE BEST MEMORY SYSTEM.

Forget each kindness that you do
As soon as you have done it;
Forget the praise that falls to you
The moment you have won it;
Forget the stander that you hear
Before you can repeat it;
Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer,
Wherever you may meet it.
Remember every kindness done
To you what'er its measure;
Remember praise by others won
And pass it on with pleasure;
Remember every promise made
And keep it to the letter;
Remember those who lend you aid
And be a grateful debtor.
Remember all the happiness
That comes your way in living;
Forget each worry and distress,
Be hopeful and forgiving;
Remember good, remember truth,
Remember heaven's above you;
And you will find, through age and youth,
True joys and hearts to love you.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.

We have all read and thrilled over the story of Robinson Crusoe; his exciting escape from shipwreck, his cave, parrot, man Friday, and all the various adventures in his four years' primitive life on an unknown island of the sea.
The world has always wondered who was the original of Daniel Defoe's immortal story.
Defoe himself never told the sources of his tale, but it was assumed that Alexander Selkirk, an English sailor who led a Crusoe like existence for four years on an island furnished the background of fact for the novel.
Recent research, however has thrown a new light on the identity of the famous adventurer.
Instead of Selkirk, the real Crusoe was probably a Portuguese nobleman named Fernar Lopez, and his island was not Juan Fernandez, near the South American mainland but the now well-known island of St. Helena which lies a thousand miles off the west coast of Africa.
Crusoe's adventures more closely resemble the actual experiences of Lopez—who spent a lonely exile upon St. Helena for nearly thirty years—than those of the sailor Selkirk.

Lopez shared his exile with a black slave, he carried ashore several goats, and a rooster which might have suggested the parrot of Defoe's fertile imagination.

You will remember that Crusoe was visited by blacks from the mainland. Selkirk was on an island near South America, where there were no native blacks. St. Helena on the contrary, off the African coast, might have been invaded by venturesome blacks.

In the book, Crusoe, after being rescued and arriving in his native land, soon tired of civilization and went back to his island.

This tallies exactly with Lopez's voluntary return to St. Helena after a visit to Portugal and Italy at the end of three years' island life.

Selkirk, however, settled down in England and stayed there, as records show.

All the evidence bears out the theory that Defoe's romance was based upon the history of the Portuguese nobleman.

Lopez was a soldier of fortune who was banished from his country and its territories by the Portuguese Viceroy of Malaya, on account of a bad scrape that occurred while he was in the Malay Islands.

Upon the death of the viceroy three years later, Lopez found himself at liberty to leave the Indies and return home.

The journey by sailing vessel from India to Europe was a long, slow pull around the Cape of Good Hope. On the way, Lopez had plenty of time to think over his situation and fearing for his safety under the insecure laws of the times, he changed his mind about going back to Portugal.

It happened that the vessel bearing Lopez came within sight of the island of St. Helena, then unexplored and uninhabited.

He suddenly seized upon the notion making it a refuge.

Obtaining the consent of the captain to put him ashore, he took with him a slave, a good supply of food, tools, firearms, a rooster and some goats.

Leaving Lopez and his slave to their fate the ship sailed on to Portugal, where the crew spread the news of his strange self imposed banishment. It was soon repeated in every port of Europe, and Lopez became a famous character.

Although Defoe lived two centuries later he undoubtedly knew of Lopez, for the romance of his singular life was told and eagerly listened to for many generations.

After three years had passed, Lopez looked out on his harbor one morning—and saw a vessel.

It bore a message from the King of Portugal, who had become interested in his story and desired him to return home. He promised safety and royal favors.

But Lopez either mistrusted the offer as a ruse to lure him back to be punished, or else had come to prefer solitary existence to life in European capitals, for he flatly refused to set foot on the ship. Whereupon they took him aboard by force.

Disembarking at Lisbon, the exile found himself a popular hero. He was entertained and lionized everywhere and crowds followed him through the streets.

He was received graciously at court by the king, and even journeyed to Rome, where he was given audience by the Pope.

But three years' wild life with only a slave for companion had made him so unused to the noise, crowds and confusion of his native land that he was unhappy and longed for his island abode.

Finally, the king ordered that he be transported to St. Helena, where he was once more "monarch of all he surveyed."

There he lived for more than twenty-five years, until his lonely death about the year 1546.

STATE HEALTH DEPARTMENT ON THE WATCH.

Hot weather does not mean a string of bass, golf links, moonlight on the ocean, or a mountain lodge to members of the engineering division, State Health Department. Summer is always a busy season for them. A vigilant lookout must be kept for the appearance of typhoid fever; sources of infection immediately sought; water supply and milk kept up to standard.

In addition to these regular chores, camps now occupied by homeless miners must be watched so that they do not become breeding spots for sickness and contagious disease, and the sanitary arrangements for the military camps in the western part of the State must be inspected. District engineer, H. P. Drake, is conducting the inspection of National Guard camps near Colesburg, and J. W. Fortenbaugh, district engineer, has headquarters at Ebensburg.

County fair grounds are being examined to determine whether previous orders from the department regarding improvements in water and sewage systems have been completed, and if not, to insure such completion before the fair opens.

In response to appeals from the Chester Water company and the local board of health, for assistance in locating and eliminating unpleasant tastes and odors noticed in the filtered water supply for Chester, an investigation is being made there. The trouble has not yet been located but the water has been made palatable by more thorough treatment.

C. E. Emerson Jr., chief engineer, says that "along about November things may simmer down a bit, and then vacations will be among the things for which we offer thanks on the last Thursday of that month."

Reduction of two cents a gallon in the price of gasoline and of one cent a gallon in that of kerosene were announced by the Atlantic Refining company. The company's announcement said that the cuts would apply to its products in all of Pennsylvania and Delaware and that they made the ruling price of gasoline at service stations 27 cents and at garages 24 cents, while kerosene at stores would be 13 cents a gallon.

Must Report Travel Expense.

According to a Harrisburg dispatch uniform expense blanks to standardize certain expenditures for the State government and to place all departments and bureaus upon an equal footing have been made the rule for State capitol business. Not only does the new blank do away with the separate forms of each department, some of which were twice as big as the others and assorted shapes, but it establishes methods of checking and auditing. It likewise requires a statement of the nature of the trip for which the expense was incurred, together with a statement of residence, official headquarters and voting or home residence.

Among the rules laid down are that Pullman charges will not be allowed for less than ninety miles; no transportation allowed between the capitol and homes; no maximum or average charges for hotels or meals will be considered, only exact amounts, while such personal charges as "barber bills, baths, laundry, clothes pressed, shoe shines, valets or maids, etc.," will not be approved.

Receipts are required for all items except car fare and meals. Charges for automobile hire are limited to ten cents a mile, while it is stated "when destination can be reached by railroad or street car only such fares will be allowed."

Answered Her Question.

A lady who kept a little curly poodle lost her pet and called on the police to find it. The next day one of the force came with the dog very wet and dirty.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

If You Are Too Tired to Eat

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla. A well-known Justice of the Peace in Indiana says Hood's Sarsaparilla makes "food taste good." After taking three bottles he eats 3 hearty meals a day, works hard and sleeps well.

A grateful woman writes: "I earnestly recommend all women who wish to be made new, or who are troubled with that tired feeling, to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It wonderfully relieved me of sour stomach, distress and belching."
Get Hood's, and only Hood's. 67-30

The lady was overjoyed, and asked a number of silly questions, one being: "Where did you find my darling?" "Why, ma'am," said the officer, "a fellow had him on a pole and was washing windows with him."—Safety First Bulletin, P. R. R.

Protect Your Valuable Furs Against Moth, Fire and Theft!

Our Cold Storage Does It

FROM time immemorial Furs have been among woman's most prized and precious possessions. She has always considered them on a par with her diamonds. Unlike the precious stones, Furs are perishable. They are susceptible to deterioration through extremes of heat and the ravages of moth, as well as being subject to loss by fire and theft.

No woman in her own home—no matter what care she takes during the summertime—can give her prized Furs the adequate protection that can be afforded by having them stored for the hot weather in our Arctic Cold Storage Vaults—the last word in scientifically designed Fur Storage—one of the largest as well as the most modern and up-to-date plants in America.

Most Modern Fur Storage Plant Safety First—and Always

A vast amount of money has been spent on these vaults and in the installation of the most improved and technically exact refrigerating machinery—the latest and most modern yet devised by man for the proper care and preservation of Furs and other articles which may be lost by fire or theft or deterioration through extremes of hot weather.

Moth and other insects which attack Furs, Tapes, trines, etc., have, in the past, been fought with such weapons as moth balls, camphor, tobacco, cedar chests, etc., all of which are still used by many housewives. Although these doubtless help to keep the moths away from the goods, if the eggs have already been deposited they are of no value whatever in preventing the development of the insect and subsequent damage. Nay, while it helps somewhat, also removes the natural oils so essential to the appearance and preservation of the Furs.

The solution of the problem, then, is Dry Cold Storage such as we have provided in our new Fur Storage Vaults, scientifically constructed of thick walls of concrete and corkboard, chilled to a temperature of 10 to 20 degrees Fahrenheit by a system of cold air carried in myriads of coiled pipes.

For this service, which includes insurance against fire and burglary, as well as protection against moth and other pests, the rate is nominal, being but 2 1/2% of your own valuation of your goods. For instance, a Fur Coat or an Oriental Rug you value at $100 each will cost you only $2.50 each for storage and insurance, surely little enough to give you peace of mind about the safety of your treasured Furs, Tapes, trines, Rugs, fine Clothing or valuable fabrics of any kind.

Let us take care of them for you. Send by express insured and we will store and care them for you until you are ready for them again.
