

THE WOMAN QUESTION.

By L. A. Miller.

From the palmy days of Eden to the present time the woman question has been, of all others, the hardest to settle...

Those fair daughters of Eve, who pretend to be so meek, so tender and so unobtrusive, have ever made bold to stand with the hardy sons of Adam...

Our country and times are full of instances of woman's daring and adventure. There is no gulch so dark, canyon so deep, or mountain so high...

She may tremble a little more perceptibly than man in the presence of danger, but her fear quickly vanishes. She may stop still in the face of towering obstacles...

A coat-dress is delightful for shopping when one does not prefer a suit and when a top coat is too heavy, yet summery-appearing things are not to be thought of...

As a rule, it is a bit heavy for wear, in these days of steam-heated apartments. But these are many models to be had in the finer materials developed of these becoming lines...

Trimming, however, except as it is severely tailored, is not the usual desire of the coat-dress. It is quite striking enough to rest on its merits alone...

If a woman is competent to wield such power, there is no law, written or unwritten, to hinder her from doing so. That incompetent women often assume to do it is manifestly true...

The man who will compel his wife to get up first in the morning, start the fires and prepare the breakfast is a brute; and the woman who will compel her husband to get up, light the fires and put the teakettle on, is no better...

The separate blouse and skirt are receiving much consideration at the hands of the fall designer. It is expected these neglected garments will be reinstated in milady's wardrobe...

Coats are as varied in their length as materials. One finds many short coats which might almost rank as a bolero, while others of three-quarter length fit at the waist-line and fall in circular folds...

Many houses are displaying millinery with dresses and especially original are the Mogen age modes, reminding one of a gladiator's helmet. Covering the head and extending down the back of the neck like the close-fitting cap...

Very full skirts, showing a flat effect in front and at the back, are quaint examples of the early age, and made with close-fitting corsages. The high collars and pleated ruffles of wide lace at the top, turning back to the shoulders, are effective in their picturesque styles...

Some full-skirted models display gathers from a low waist line and others are gathered inserts only from the knees. The Maison Chanel, whose house was practically made famous by success in sports coats, shows many attractive models with a wider and moderately long skirt, and plain corsage with a waist line marked by a string tie of the same fabric as that composing the dress...

The sheath-like silhouette is favored in rich metal tissues for beautiful evening dress models.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

DAILY THOUGHT.

If one door should be shut God will open another; if the peas do not yield well the beans may; if one hen leaves her eggs another will bring out all her brood...

It really isn't a bit surprising that the smartly charming coat-dress is given a place of great prominence in the autumn wardrobe. There isn't a more versatile garment to be had, and, with one in her possession, a woman feels that she always has something to depend upon...

The most distinctive thing about them, as you have doubtless already discovered, is their devotion to perfect lines. They are handsomely tailored, and have a grande dame air about them which appeals always to those who are distinguished for their taste in clothes...

In other seasons they have been developed almost entirely on the lines of the redingote. But this year, although the redingote is still as smart and as youthful as ever, it has several rivals in style. These models, which follow the wrapped-around theme, are looked upon with favor. One of the new brown tones is usually chosen, such as maroon or cafe au lait, or it may be caramel, any of which are delectable in the soft autumn materials...

As a rule, it is a bit heavy for wear, in these days of steam-heated apartments. But these are many models to be had in the finer materials developed of these becoming lines...

HOUSES OF THE FUTURE.

The Scientific American calls attention to the fact that houses are being built all over the country of concrete, either poured into forms, or concrete blocks. It predicts that this class of houses will become very common in the near future...

Another form of construction that is "coming back" is the building of houses of field stone, where the material used is the pebble-shaped field stones, obtained, very largely, from old stone walls throughout the surrounding country...

The day has probably gone forever when houses will be built entirely of wood. While the price of building lumber remains at the present figure, brick, concrete, tile and stone can beat it out, as far as expense goes...

Another thing that has gone, undoubtedly, is the "big house" of the past generation. The great old house with its many gables and wide, rambling halls, will be a curiosity to our grandchildren. The house of the future, for any but the very rich, will be small, compact, easy to heat, and with no waste space...

Drafted Men Physically Defective. Surg. General Ireland told a Washington club that of all Americans drafted for the world war under Class 1 21 per cent. were physically unfit for all military service...

The number of defective men, according to General Ireland, varied by States from 64 per cent. in Rhode Island to 35 per cent. in Kansas. More men from the cities were rejected (23 per cent.) than from the rural districts and small towns (20 per cent.)...

The shortest man came from Rhode Island, averaging 66 inches, and the tallest from Texas, averaging 68 inches...

That Morning Lameness. If you are lame every morning, and suffer urinary ills, the cause must be a cause. Often it's weak kidneys. To strengthen the weakened kidneys and avert more serious troubles, use Doan's Kidney Pills...

Mrs. H. W. Johnson, Valentine St., Bellefonte, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills whenever my kidneys troubled me. I had attacks with my kidneys and felt so miserable with my backache I could hardly get up on my feet. Mornings when I came down stairs I was so lame I couldn't raise my feet to go up the steps again. My kidneys were disordered and annoyed me a great deal. Doan's Kidney Pills from Runkle's drug store soon put an end to my suffering and rid me of the aches and pains. I depend on Doan's now when my kidneys get out of order."
