Dwight lighted the gas. "Better turn down the gas jest a little," said he, tirelessly.

Lulu handed him the two letters. He saw Ninian's writing and looked up, said "A-ha!" and held it while he tration successful, even though, to do leisurely read the advertisement of so, I must tone down extreme measdental furniture, his Ina reading over his shoulder. "A-ha!" he said again, and with designed deliberation turned to Ninian's letter. "An epistle from my dear brother Ninian." The words failed, as he saw the unsealed flap.

"You opened the letter?" he inquired incredulously. Fortunately he had no climaxes of furious calm for high occasions. All had been used on small occasions. "You opened the letter" came in a tone of no deeper horror than "You picked the flower"-once put to Lulu.

She said nothing. As it is impossible to continue looking indignantly at some one who is not looking at you, Dwight turned to Ina, who was horror and sympathy, a nice half and half.

"Your sister has been opening my mail," he said. "But, Dwight, if it's from Ninian

"It is my mail," he reminded her. "She had asked me if she might open it. Of course I told her no." "Well," said Ina practically, "what does he say?" "I shall open the letter in my own time. My present concern is this disregard of my wishes. Why did you do

"Dwight," said Ina, reasonably, "she knows what's in it and we don't. Hurry up." "She is," said Dwight, after a pause, "an ungrateful woman." He opened the letter, saw the clipping, the avowal, with its facts.

"A-ha!" said he. "So after having sheen absent with my brother for a month, you find that you were not Lulu spoke her exceeding triumph.

"You see, Dwight," she said, "he told the truth. He had another wife. He didn't just leave me." Dwight instantly cried: "But this seems to me to make you considerably worse off than if he had."

"Ou, no," Lulu sald serenely. "No.
Why," she sald, "you know how it all came about. He-he was used to thinking of his wife as dead. If he hadn't-hadn't liked me, he wouldn't have told me. You see that, don't you?"

Dwight laughed. "That your apology?" he asked.

She said nothing.

"Look here, Lulu," he went on, "this is a bad business. The less you say about it the better, for all our sakes -you see that, don't you?"

"I want the people to know the truth," Lulu said. "But it's nobody's business but our business! I take it you don't intend to sue Ninian?" "Sue him? Oh no!"

For Congress, Elisha K. Kane.

Up to You. This advertisement closes my campaign. All the money which I can afford has been spent on the circular letter which I am mailing to your homes and on these newspaper articles for which I pay direct advertising rates. Not a dollar pays for personal work. Not a single promise or pledge has been made to any person. corporation, organization or interest except as shown in that letter, the photo card and these advertisements. I haven't even delivered a single speech. (Yet all who know about me are aware that I can speak effectively and to the point. My father, General Kane, taught me to "think on my feet.") I want to be sure myself, and to make you sure, of just what you are getting when you vote for me. You have a right to my whole-hearted service. I propose to show myself worthy of seven terms in Congress. Then, like my mother's father, Wiliam Wood, I can retire at the age of 80. Thus I can impartially serve the whole district, regardless of this being "Cameron county's turn." And my fellow Congressmen dare assign me to important committees without fear that I must quit soon after I have (Continued from last week).

"There are two letters on the parlor table," Lulu answered. To Ina she added: "Let's go in the parlor."

Ido not claim to be a Socialist, Democrat or Republican also. I shall be elected by votes of ten times more Republicans, Democrats and Socialists than the entire enrollment of my own party. I'll remember that fact. While Harding remains President, my disposition will be to make his adminisures. I hope to find the broad-minded William Jennings Bryan representing

I thank also my competitors, Swoope and Snyder, for not having uttered one published word which would hurt my feelings. When I am in Congress, their suggestions will receive the friendliest welcome.

P. S.—Editorial about me in Brad- GENERAL DRAYING ford Star Tuesday afternoon is untrue in practically every particular. My letter was mailed to forty-five thousand voters without knowing their party. Except one hundred dollars from Davis McCalmont no one but my wife has contributed one cent to my campaign. My influence in past has secured prohibition endorsement and thus elected dry Republicans as often as dry Democrats.

Alberta Wheat for Europe.

Signs point to a huge quantity of Alberta wheat being shipped through Vancouver to Europe this winter. At the Vancouver Merchants Exchange 56,000 tons of grain of the prssent year's crop have already been booked for shipment through the government terminal elevator there. At this time last year not a bushel had been booked but by June last 7,000,000 bushels had been shipped through Vancouver. Conservative estimates for this year place the amount at 15,000,000 bush-
