

John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, Died on Tuesday.

Philadelphia, Dec. 14.—Funeral services for John Wanamaker, internationally famous merchant and religious leader, who died here at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, were conducted this afternoon at 2 o'clock in Bethany Presbyterian church at Twenty-second and Bainbridge streets, a neighborhood once prosperous but no longer suggestive of beauty or wealth. In that edifice, which long has been known as "John Wanamaker's church," the body of the merchant prince lay in state Thursday morning from 10 o'clock until noon. The interment in the family vault in the picturesquely situated cemetery of St. James the Less, was private. The Rev. A. Gordon MacLennan, pastor of Bethany church, conducted the services both in the church and at the vault.

Mr. Wanamaker, who was in his 85th year, had preserved himself in a remarkable manner, his active participation up until a few months ago in affairs, civic, political, industrial and religious having been regarded as almost without parallel. Although he had not been in his usual vigorous health in the last year, he was identified prominently with the recent movement to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence with a world exposition in 1926, he having been a leader in the exposition in 1876 which marked the 100th anniversary of that same historic event.

After his death the Wanamaker stores in Philadelphia and New York were closed and remained so until after the funeral.

Men prominent in all lines of endeavor joined in expression of regret at the passing of Mr. Wanamaker and tributes came from the high, the low, the rich and the poor, business associates and business rivals. President Harding, Governor Sprout, Cardinal Dougherty, Governor-elect Gifford Pinchot and others prominent in the official and religious life of the country paid personal tributes to his life, as did many others who came into contact with his manifold activities.

Philadelphia's public schools were closed for one session during the funeral in memory of Mr. Wanamaker, who, as chairman of the finance committee of the board of education, did much in building up the education system of the city. For the first time in the history of the city, the flags on municipal buildings rested at half mast in honor of a man who did not hold high public office.

Early last month Mr. Wanamaker broke down with a severe cold contracted while at his magnificent country estate, "Lyndenhurst," in Jenkintown, just north of Philadelphia. He was removed to his town house at 2032 Walnut street. The first indication of the grave nature of his illness was when his three attending physicians began issuing bulletins on the condition of his health. For several days preceding his death his condition was said to be "improving."

Early Tuesday morning, however, that his end was near became apparent. His children were sent for. His two daughters, Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton and Mrs. Norman MacLeod, were at his bedside when he died, as were members of their immediate families. A severe coughing spell, which had gradually been sapping his strength, weakened his heart action until it stopped. "He died like a stoic," said Mr. MacLeod.

His only son, Rodman Wanamaker, of New York, who is quite ill himself, arrived here on Tuesday after his father's death, and had to be assisted into the house.

Mr. Wanamaker was born in Philadelphia on July 11th, 1838, hence was 84 years and 5 months old. His father was a brickmaker and the first money Mr. Wanamaker earned as a boy was seven cents for piling up bricks. His first job was that of an errand boy in a book store for which he received $1.25 a week. His next job was in a clothing store but he quit that to go into business with his brother-in-law under the firm name of Brown & Wanamaker. In 1876 he began the development of his large department store. Twenty years later he opened his store in New York.

Mr. Wanamaker was an ardent Republican and always took a leading part in political affairs. He served as Postmaster General under President Benjamin Harrison. In addition to being the official head of one of the biggest stores in the world Mr. Wanamaker was best known through his church and Sunday school work. In this respect his death causes a vacancy that will be hard to fill.

JACKSONVILLE.

Miss Mary Bartley spent Sunday with her friend, Miss Ethel Neff.

Charles Bartley and family were Saturday evening visitors in our town.

Miss Mary Garrett, who has been confined to her bed for some time with illness, is now improving.

Mrs. Mary Resides, of Williamsport, is visiting at the home of her daughters, Mrs. Clyde Yearick and Mrs. Leon Monteith.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. William Beightol, who was quite seriously burned recently, is getting along as well as can be expected.

Miss Blanche Fisher, who has been a guest at the Harry Hoy home for several weeks, is making preparations to return to her home in Pittsburgh.

Our hunters returned home on Saturday without any game. They camped on the Allegheny mountains and reported deer very scarce in that section.

The funeral of Mrs. Z. W. Hoy, of Howard, took place on Saturday morning. The services were held at her late home by Rev. Gass, assisted by Rev. Sheetz, and burial was made in the Reformed cemetery at this place.

Within the Law.

A salesmanlike looking inspector stopped over night in a small town Kansas hotel and was surprised to find a dirty roller towel in the washroom. Indignantly he said to the landlord:

"Don't you know that it has been against the law for years to put up a roller towel in this State?"

"Sure, I know it," replied the proprietor, "but no ex post facto law goes in Kansas, and that there towel was put up before the law was passed."—Topeka Capital.
