Senator Betts has already introduced two bills, that if enacted, will prove very beneficial legislation for Pennsylvania. Both are along the line of making good his campaign promise to work for the passage of a "Blue-sky Law" that will curb the fleecing of the public through "wildcat" stocks and an attempt to repeal the inheritance tax law of 1917.

The spring of the year is the time when most women look over their furniture, discard all that has become useless and purchase new. Anticipating this fact W. R. See advertisement on fifth page of today's paper, then visit his store and see the many bargains offered.

A marriage license was granted in Hollidaysburg on Wednesday to Clarke Arthur Renner, of Altoona, and Flo Ellen Bartley, of Bellefonte. Mrs. Bartley only recently secured a divorce from Frank P. The first death warrant signed by Governor Pinchot was that of David Disque, of Philadelphia, to which he attached his signature last Thursday. The date set for the electrocution is March 17th. Disque was convicted in January, 1922, of the murder of Mrs. Sarah A. Parr in July, 1921. The crime was a most brutal one, as the woman, eighty-five years old, was beaten to death with a piece of rubber hose and robbed of $310.

Centre county had another fall of snow on Sunday, about six inches of it. Fortunately there has been little wind with any of the snowfalls this winter so that travel has not been blocked on either the public roads or the railroads. But the snow is plenty deep enough without drifting. There are places in the mountains where it is protected from the sun that the snow in valleys is less than two feet.

BACK FROM THE FRIGID NORTH.

Dr. Eloise Meek Finishes Her Trip to Alaska.

Seattle, Washington, January 22nd, 1923.

The trip from Alaska was a delightful one and, although too cold to stay on deck continually, yet we all walked around most of the time. My stateroom opened upon the deck, was steam-heated and so hot I could not endure it without my door open both day and night so, you see, how nice a trip from Alaska in the middle of winter may really be. There were one hundred and fifty passengers on board and, of course, a group of congenial souls managed to make ourselves a most pleasant time. We came by the inside passage, stopping at all the southeastern towns—Valdez being the first; then Cordova, where one leaves the boats to take that Copper River trail and railroad to the Kennecott mines. Both of these towns are beautifully located but impress one with their lack of chance to expand. Then came Juneau. It is quite a prosperous looking place and, of course, being the capital, has more people in it than the others had. I forgot Wrangle, where totem poles are very much in evidence and the only place in this southeastern section where native life was even indicated. Ketchikan came next and is the nicest looking of all these towns. Lots of really good buildings, several streets paved with cement, make one think of the States and being back to civilization. It has always boasted of being the first town in Alaska but I am told that a new town is developing at Hyder, on the Canadian border, where some very good mines are being developed so that it will claim the distinction, if there is any, of being "the first town in Alaska." These places are all new yet are not as large now as they were some years ago, except for one or two, have no backing, consequently will retrograde. Alaska, no doubt, will some day come into her own but I do not think that day will come until the States become crowded and people are pushed into the North for living room.

I must not forget to tell you of the scenery on the way down. It is truly not over-estimated and is superb. The "inside passage" is so narrow in places that it seems as if one could throw a stone onto either bank; the mountains are wooded to the shore and spruce trees look to be growing out of the ocean. It is said that in the early part of nineteen hundred there were plenty of deer to be seen any time along the banks but we saw none and I can well imagine that the steamboat whistles would frighten away all that the hunters' guns spared. I was told that people who came out over the Canadian Pacific and went on to Alaska for a trip did not consider the scenery worth while but they must have gotten an "over-dose," hence were sickened, for I surely cannot agree with them.

I shall leave next Sunday or Monday for home, stopping in Omaha and Chicago, and thus expect to see you soon.

Former Philipsburg Policeman Jailed for Forgery.

Peter A. Hitt, a former policeman in Philipsburg, was brought to the Centre county jail last Wednesday in default of $1000 bail to await trial on the charge of forgery.

Hitt was appointed night policeman in Philipsburg several years ago about the time that the prohibition law went into effect and the one outstanding act during his term of service in that town was the capture of a truck load of whiskey. He later resigned his job in Philipsburg to become chief of police in Clearfield. He was dismissed from service in that town in the latter part of last year and his career since then seems to have been punctuated with the issuance of worthless checks, according to a story published in the Clearfield Progress, which charged him with passing checks in Lock Haven, Bellefonte, Tyrone and Johnstown, with no money in the bank to meet them. His arrest, however, followed the discounting of a note for $100 at the Moshannon National bank, in Philipsburg, bearing the endorsement of his wife and father-in-law, both of whom repudiated the signatures. Hitt was arrested at Woodland, and at a hearing before Squire Byron was unable to furnish bail and was committed to jail.

Prohibition Anniversary Observed.

An interesting meeting celebrating the third anniversary of total prohibition was held in Petrikin hall on Sunday afternoon, January 21st, under the auspices of the Bellefonte W. C. T. U., Miss Rebecca N. Rhoads, the president, presiding. Brief addresses were made by Revs. T. W. Young, David R. Evans, E. E. McKelvey, George E. Smith and Reed O. Steely, all of Bellefonte, and Nelson Hibsham and Charles Dickerhoff, members of the Penn State young people's branch of the W. C. T. U. Another pleasing feature of the occasion was the presence of from twenty to thirty boys and girls of the Loyal Temperance Legion branch of the W. C. T. U., who sang one of their songs and added much to the success of the gathering. These Loyal Temperance Legioners, numbering forty, under the leadership of Mrs. Steely, were entertained with a sleigh ride one evening recently, which was followed by a social at Mountain View, of west Linn street.

In addition to the usual grist of county, borough and township officers Clinton county will this year elect a judge and two associate judges. For judge Eugene H. Baird will be a candidate to succeed himself and among the other possible candidates will be the present district attorney, J. J. Kintner. Mrs. Julia D. Stevenson, wife of the present county treasurer, John R. Stevenson, will be a candidate for the nomination to succeed her husband.

Dr. C. J. Hollister, chief of the dental division of the Department of Health, has a contribution in today's "Watchman" on "Good Teeth" that should be read with profit and interest. Many who heard him address the Womens club and Parent-Teachers meeting last October were so well entertained that they would gladly have listened an hour longer and we hope that his spoken and written message on the gospel of Good Teeth will not go unheeded.

Twelve crates of Kansas cotton-tails arrived in Bellefonte on Saturday, consigned to game protector Thomas E. Mosier. They came from Hutchinson, Kan., and the shipment included twelve rabbits to a crate or one hundred and forty-four all told. This is the second consignment of Kansas rabbits to be put out in this section for propagating purpose and inasmuch as they multiply very fast during the summer season rabbit hunting ought to afford good sport next fall.

The men interested in starting a new laundry in the N. E. Miller garage have decided to install a water filter in their plant so as to avoid draining their wash water directly into Spring creek and thus avoiding all danger of contaminating or driving away the many trout which have become such an entrancing sight to all strangers visiting Bellefonte. Mr. Kern, proprietor of the City laundry, will probably put down a cess pool to take care of the water from his washers.

In a letter received from Emanuel Klepfer, long a resident of Wildwood, N. J., he writes that he is now staying at the home of his son, Alfred, at Eureka, Bucks county, where the young man is engaged as a florist. He has thirty thousand square feet of ground in cultivation under glass, all planted with the choicest specimens of plants and flowers. He owns the place and has every prospect of becoming quite successful. The item is of interest to the people of Bellefonte because of the fact that Emanuel Klepfer married a Bellefonte girl, Miss Ada Haupt, a sister of Mrs. G. Fred Musser, of this place, the Klepfer family having originally resided at Coleville.

The Bellefonte friends of Noah H. Swayne II, formerly president of the Nittany Iron company, in this place, will be interested to know that he is still in voice and contributing to the pleasure of music lovers. He sang at a concert in the Metropolitan opera house, New York, one night last week, and his number proved a feature of the program, as he was recalled several times to acknowledge the expressions of appreciation by an audience that packed the great auditorium from pit to critics gallery. The last time we heard Mr. Swayne sing was on a very notable occasion. It was at a gathering of war-workers at the Union League, Philadelphia, where Wm. G. McAdoe, then Secretary of the Treasury, made the principal address. He was introduced by William C. Sproul, who was then being groomed as a candidate for Governor. The occasion was notable because it was the first time a Democrat had ever made an address in the Union League.

Bill Scullin—Philosopher.

Possibly some of you will recall having read in the "Watchman" of January 19th, the following paragraph:

Years ago Billy Scullin was wont to advertise his sartorial creations in the Tyrone Herald with a quotation that ran "The apparel of proclaims the man." We thought of that idea of Billy's when we read of the way that Vare delegation, the Union club, of Philadelphia, was dolled up in the inaugural parade. Knowing something of some of those statesmen who wore the two-quart lids, the oxford coats and brown spats, we are wondering whether their apparel did proclaim the men. Our idea of it is that the two-quart lid was only a camouflage. The pint on the hip would have proclaimed that delegation better.

By way of explaining what is to follow it should be here recorded that Bill Scullin, of Tyrone, is an old friend. A very dear old friend, and while we always knew him as a creator of super-things sartorial, the possessor of a voice that on occasion had a strange appeal to our barber-shop tenor musical ear and a naturalist—so far as apple trees, apple blossoms and apple butter enter into the investigations of such scientists—who might have made the Burbanks, Burpees and Burroughs blush for their ignorance, we never had a suspicion that he was a philosopher. Never, until last Thursday, when we read the letter, which we here make public, because it is really too clever to find its way into the oblivion of the waste basket.

Tyrone, Pa., Jan. 25th, 1923.

Mr. George R. Meek, Bellefonte, Pa.

My very dear Sir: Your recent reference to my old advertisement as suggestive of your allusion to the inaugural parade at Harrisburg has been called to my attention several times. Personally I have no grievance, but I do regret to note among my Republican friends a suggestion of hurt or bruised feelings on account of your quip—a pint on the hip—Especially since our Exalted Ruler had previously decreed that old Pennsylvania shall be as dry as the proverbial Democrat. And naught but bleached bones and grinning skulls shall, in the future, indicate the location of what was once a delightful oasis.

Verily, perchance, if our Dear Governor is the Dr. Munyon of executives: "There is hope!"—for bootleggers.

I would suggest a more modern interpretation of Poppa Polonius' advice, thus:

"Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy" Expressed in Scotch, corn or rye "But I charge ye, conceal it well beneath thy doublet." Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice for now, 'tis the breath that it proclaims the man.

Well, so long, George. Hope you are well and happy and trying to live down your past, which recalls to my memory the many happy week-ends I spent at the dear old Nittany Country club, discussing the nature, characteristics and habits of the apple tree. What a gorgeous, imposing spectacle to see one in full blossom.

Ah! The melody of the human voice (Bill used to sing to me because I was the only one who hadn't the heart to try to can him.—Ed.) chanting simple ballads, like a chime of celestial bells; luxuriously blending celestial harmony with the pungent perfume of the apple blossoms. But my lack of descriptive powers, halt my feeble efforts to do justice to those by-gone days of cultured recreation—when compacts and friendships were made which have lasted and will last through life.

(Here's where he becomes philosopher.) How like the human family is the fruit of the orchard: First the bud, then the blossom, followed by the juvenile pippin, flapper, etc. Rosy cheeked, with but the rouge of nature. Some leave the parent stem before maturity. Some after. But in either case, when they embark on the Ship of Destiny, they will be judged solely by their character; and not by beauty, form or complexion. But my lack of descriptive powers, halt my feeble efforts to do justice to those by-gone days of cultured recreation—when compacts and friendships were made which have lasted and will last through life.

Those that are sound to the heart need not worry about their form or complexion. But those poor, misguided pippins that depended on their attractive forms and cheeks of various hues; those who cultivated chic for character or a sound core must find their destiny in the garbage barrel; just as the human derelict of unsound or dishonest character must sooner or later find his destiny in the human garbage barrel.

But where am I mauling?—Voluminous couldn't reveal my thoughts so I will close by assuring you that my declining years are pleasant. I am neither gray, grave nor grouchy, I am just enjoying the well earned compensation of an example and advocate of the simple life.

Very cordially yours, W. H. SCULLIN.

Further comment is unnecessary. We know Bill's got his second sight and see in apple trees again.

Met, Engaged and Married Within Five Days.

Bellefonte people will be interested in the announcement of the marriage of Lieut. Melvin Bassett, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Bassett, of Washington, D. C., and a grand-son of the late Rev. James P. Hughes, of the Bellefonte Academy. Lieut. Bassett was married on Saturday, January 20th, and the facts in connection with his romance were published in last Friday's Philadelphia North American, as follows:

Met on Tuesday, engaged on Friday, married on Saturday. So reads the breath-taking romance of Lieutenant Melvin Hughes Bassett, United States navy, and his bride, formerly Miss Eleanor Sage, of 141 west Phil-Elena street, Germantown.

The two were married last Saturday, after an early morning journey from this city to Elkton in a taxicab. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William R. Moon. The couple then took a cab to Wilmington and returned by train.

The newlyweds were parted temporarily yesterday, when Lieutenant Bassett left with his ship, the Hannibal, for southern waters. The couple plan to meet each other in the Isle of Pines, off Cuba, in a short time.

News of the elopement came as a complete surprise to friends of both. Mrs. Bassett is 21 years old and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph V. Sage. She was graduated from the Elmira College for women. Her husband is 23 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Bassett, of Washington, D. C.

Parental blessing was bestowed by parents of both. The two met Tuesday a week ago, when Miss Sage was taken to lunch by a girl friend. The girl friend knew an ensign in the restaurant, who introduced Lieutenant Bassett.

Heverly—Close.—Charles W. Heverly and Miss Rebecca Close, both of State College, were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Jane Close, on Monday. A few intimate friends and relatives were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. S. C. Stover, of the Reformed church. Following congratulations the young couple came to Bellefonte by automobile and left on the train for a trip to Washington, D. C., and other eastern cities. Both the bride and bridegroom have for some time past been employed in Gentzel's store at State College and are excellent young people. They will make their home at the College.

Thal.—Kephart.—Announcement has been made of the marriage on New Year's day of Francis Thal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thal, of Bellefonte, and Miss Ethel Kephart, of Osceola Mills.
