THE HUMAN FACTOR. A Complete Report of Year's Work at Bellefonte Y. M. C. A.

During the past year over seven hundred individuals have helped to make the work of the Bellefonte Young Men's Christian Association, one of the largest enterprises in the interest of lifting humanity to a higher and more useful life and interest in the community. The number of individuals contributing to this end are as

In addition to this there were hundreds of children who enjoyed the public playground, regardless of creed and supervised by the Secretary durany expense for time and effort put into the cause of providing a safe and happy place for the children to play under supervision. It is safe to say no other organization in town has reached and provided to such a large extent in providing uplifting and helpful activities to so large an aggregate.

EXTENSION PROMOTION. "To serve the community" was the motto adopted and various features have been adopted to this end. The Rural membership has been established for those living outside Bellefonte at a reduced rate, giving them the full privileges of the Association when in town. Many rural High school students and men working in factories have taken out memberships.

With a view to assisting the rural community a rest room has been provided on the second floor, open to those coming into town desiring a place for rest and shelter. The country people coming into town for shopping are getting into the way of using the room and many people awaiting train connections are referred to the use of the room.

A Sunday school baseball league composed of four teams was conducted by the Y. M. C. A., the Methodist team winning the trophy.

PHYSICAL ACTIVITIES. During the year classes were conducted for Business Men, Seniors. Students, Employed boys, Juniors, Women and Girls with a total enroll- Interest ment of 145; 148 class sessions were held with a total attendance of 2119. Towels In addition to this the gymnasium was used for basket ball games and Entertainment other athletic events which total several hundred attendance. BOWLING ALLEYS. Bowling proved to be a very popular sport last season. Two Bowling Leagues were organized in which 65 men participated and it is safe to say that as many men used the alleys regularly who were not members of the league. A series of 66 games were played, not one was defaulted. The American Legion won the Bowling challenge trophy, grocer's team being second.

The alleys were put in first class condition at a cost of about $400 for repairs and supplies. No financial profit accrued from them last year as shown by the following figures: Total expenditure on alleys $1023.00

But many hours of social fellowship were spent on it by a large number of

CAMP. Thirty-one boys enjoyed ten days at Camp Morris, on Spring creek, last summer at a cost of $5.00 per boy, the Association taking care of extra expenses, and the boys were greatly benefitted from the outing and are looking forward to a longer time this year. The plans for this year provides for a larger camp, for more boys, for a longer time at the same rate per day and those who went are COMMUNITY ROOM AND LIBRARY. A Community room on the second floor was furnished for a meeting place of many organizations. During the past year the following organizations have made regular use of the room: The Business Men's Association, Camp Fire Girls, Women's Auxiliary, the Board of Trade, Royal Neighbors of America, the Ministerial Association, Y. W. C. A. Girls and the Hospital Board.

The Women's Auxiliary have started a library of over 1000 fiction books and a large reference library. It is open to the public on payment of annual library fees. The boy's library of 250 books has been well patronized, having a membership of forty-six and hundreds of books have been issued during the year.

The Women's Auxiliary and Y. W. Girls have rendered valuable assistance during the past year in providing social events and banquets and in furnishing and taking care of the rooms. DORMITORIES.

A limited accommondation was provided last year for dormitory men, or color, which work was promoted but those enjoying this privilege are very enthusiastic. Accommodations ing ten weeks last summer, without for six young men are being provided for this year.

Little, jaunty tailored suits she shows us of hip length; coats and simple straight skirts, a little above the ankles but made gayly young by bands of narrow rainbow-colored ribbons and braid on the pockets and hemmed col-

I am thankful to report that, Chez Jenny, the waist is normal. I think we have quite finished with silk. Little, straight coats, too, of Chinese effects in cut and color, and one quite splendid cape for evening seems to radiate for a big Chinese motif, em-broidered in gold and forming its back. But her general effects remain charmingly simple, even naive, aided by such details as that hip waist, otherwise so hideous. Blouses harmonizing and completing the color scheme accompanying suits usually fastened at the throat with narrow ribbon.

Jenny will always be different. Instead of the Egyptian she displays the Chinese note—motifs of pagodas, parasols, mandarins, geishas always, so discreet in embroideries of pearls, or on day frocks round, turned-down collars made of lingerie or rows of rainbow ribbon. This rainbow ribbon runs so gayly through all of the collection of Jenny-skirts and little jackets curling up in embroideries and ing, has been cleared up and a deficit cocardes broadening out sometimes on the budget of 1922 provided for. not quite, disappearing at the collar or wrist. Once it swaggered out as real Roman stripes around a black taffeta skirt. As all the world talks and thinks things Egyptian now, Jenny dis-dains the popular Egyptian atmosphere—but even she has not wholly escaped. The serpent of the Nile appears on two models beginning above the waist and winding around the body until below the hips, once in black leather stitched on a black cloth dress and again as gorgeous scaly creatures of gold, orange and blue sequins. I permit myself to suggest them to ladies who fear above all the Jenny's colors are very discreet. She conceded rainbow trimming, but her bases for tailored suits are soft or scarlet, mauve and purple, are used as trimming or similar effects of col-hem, two halves that one may see are quite symmetrical. Sometimes this line is a broad stitched band of material or rainbow ribbon or strip of beads or embroideries on afternoon and evening dresses.

We had a little laugh when "Far West" was announced and beheld a short little coat of dull rose suede over a pale chiffon bleuse of the same tone worn with a black skirt. Would not you cowmen be pleased to see that? Jenny is indeed quite discreet, and I think she but emphasizes this quality by one or two bizarre touches, such as the serpents I've told you of, and the separate gauntlet cuffs worn with sleeveless dresses. Of lace or solid curls of ribbon, they were some times narrow, a mere bracelet, but

The youthful charm of the plaited skirt and the straight-line blouse of all-over material is quite convincinggraph that faithfully depicts a fashion which will continue through the spring and the summer.

Another version of the mode of the plaited skirt and overblouse is pictured in the plain and printed taffeta of special manufacture combined to make possible a very charming and desira-

Sowing Alfalfa With Clover Seed.

A great many farmers in Pennsylvania find it easy to get a stand of alfalfa by sowing with small grain in the spring, provided the "alfalfa es-sentials" are attended to. The safest dan, however, is to first try mixing browns, beige, pistache and her fa-vorite navy blue. These colors, and even black, appear again in her day frocks though these brighten and blossom into printed crepes and mus-later crops largely alfalfa. or by rows of embroidered beads or silk, but always of striped effect, either straight or curled.

The chemise frock Jenny completely abandons, replacing it with frocks composed of two or three tiered skirts worn with a belero or a bolero effect.

One-sided effects, whether of draping or trimming, Jenny eliminates from her collection. But more, she squareher collection. But more, she squarely divides, I think, on half dresses, by a line down back from neck to skirt line who can guarantee that their seed is northern or western grown. Imported or southwestern seed is responsible for many failures. Kansas seed seems satisfactory for the southern counties, northwestern common alfalfa is safe for the central counties, but at least half Grimm seed may be advisable in the north or at high altitudes. (4) Innoculation is alfalfa is first sown. Innoculation material can be secured from The Pennsylvania State College or the Department of Agriculture at Washington, through the county agent, or dry sifted soil from an old alfalfa field may be mixed with the moistened seed before sowing.
