FRIDAY, APRIL 27:
FRANK MAYO in "THE FIRST DEGREE," a good, western melodrama that keeps interest up from first to the last and will please the lovers of this sort of play. Also, the first episode of Art Acord in "THE OREGON TRAIL," a typical western serial that will interest those who like them.

Carry Mine's Output Through Tunnel.
 An eastern coal company, in opening up three new mines, situated close together, was confronted with the problem of transporting the output to a river four and a quarter miles away, with steep and rugged hills intervening. A railroad around the hills or one through appeared to be too expensive in first cost and in operation, so it was decided to bore a small tunnel through the hills and convey the coal on a series of belts, as shown in the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The distance of four and a quarter miles, in which there is a rise of 300 feet, will be made with 20 conveyors in series, each delivering the coal to the one ahead. At the loading end, the belt will be five feet wide for receiving the coal direct from the mine cars as they are hoisted up the shaft, and will carry the coal 1,500 feet to the next conveyor, which will be four feet wide. The unloading belt at the river will be four feet wide, and will deliver to four or six other belts, which discharge the coal through chutes into barges.
