Will There be a Short Wheat Crop?

Last week we called attention to the unpromising appearance of the wheat fields of Centre county. From observation made ten days ago the prediction that there will not be half a normal crop seemed justified. Many of the fields looked practically bare, others were badly spotted and even the best seemed to have a weak stand.

The all day rain of Saturday has had almost a magical effect for the better. but pick up and stool out as it will the farmers of Centre county can scarcely look for yields such as they have been having for some years past.

The government reports of conditions all over the country are none too favorable, both as to winter and spring wheat prospects.

Conditions of this sort might well be kept in mind by the farmer who is still holding his last year's crop. While most of them have sold there are some who have their grain in their granaries. Wheat is now $1.30 per bushel here, having moved up from $1.25 within the last two weeks. What the future may be is only conjectural, of course, but if crop conditions do not improve there is reasonable ground for the hope that the price will advance.

That the financial centres have already appraised such a possibility is shown in the following article from the Wall Street Journal. The fact that it predicts a sensitive wheat market is indicative of the fact that there is little certainty, even in the best informed quarters, as to what the fall crop will be. It says: vations of that date are not greatly to cles. be relied upon. There are, however, some features this year which add considerable weight to the condition report and will no doubt be reflected in

There has been none this year. Much of this area will prove a complete failure. It is doubtful also if the stooling in other sections will be as full as usual, and this is what determines the yield to the acre.

forecast of 572,000,000 bushels is not of famine proportions, although it is smaller than any crop harvested since 1918 when the production was 565,-000,000, but offset by a large crop of spring wheat. Weather conditions in the northwest now are favoring the movement there for decreased acreage of spring wheat. The surplus wheat in the United States is really small, although Canada has a large amount; southern continent shipments are beginning to taper off, and the world outlook for winter wheat is slightly less than of last year.

Wheat in the market made but little response to the government report, but actual conditions seem to say that in a short time it may well be responsive to every unfavorable aspect of the weather. A market sensitive to crop scares is to be expected this Sugar is Dearer by 571 Per Cent. Than in May, 1922.

Sugar is now 57½ per cent. dearer than it was in May, 1922, before the Republican Congress enacted Fordney-McCumber profiteers' law, which put a tax of two cents a pound on every bit of sweetening used in American homes. In the last days of April, 1923, the average retail price of sugar was 102 cents a pound. In May, 1922, the average retail price of sugar was 6.6 cents a pound.

This means that in May, 1922, a housewife could get 15 pounds of sugar for a dollar and that now the same quantity costs $1.57½. This increase is due to the Republi-
