That a woman can fool a man, at least on special occasions, was demonstrated by Mrs. Elmer Rossman last Friday evening. Through the assistance of a nearby neighbor her husband was induced to take a trip to State College. Before Mr. Rossman could answer the lights were turned on and four of his lusty neighbors grabbed him and carried him into the room which was filled with friends. Flivvers, Nothing Down, $5 a Week, in Austria.

Henry Ford has opened a campaign in Austria for "a car in every family." He announces that the well known flivver will be placed in Austria garages for nothing down and $50,000 kronen, or $5, weekly. The total cost of a Ford in Austria is 50,000,000 kronen, or $720, so the easy payments will take three years.

Inasmuch as several substantial, natty cars even cheaper to run are manufactured locally at the same price, the easy-payment scheme has been introduced in hope of diminishing competition.

MAGNUS IN THE SENATE.

"One swallow does not make a summer," neither would the election of a silly, visionary radical like Magnus Johnson to the United States Senate, taken by itself, have any great significance except as it may demonstrate the tendency of the electorate to suffer from periodical dementia and to seek in some new political adventure a remedy for its hypochondriasis, an outlet for its temporary delirium. This is not the first time that the dignity of the Senate has been affronted by the election of some asinine burlesque politician to sit in that august body halloved by the memory of John Quincy Adams, Henry Clay, John Caldwell Calhoun, Daniel Webster, William Henry Seward, James A. Garfield and a host of others among the eminent statesmen of America.

Taken by itself, the election of Johnson means nothing. The sovereign State of Minnesota has the privilege of making itself ridiculous in the eyes of the nation and the world.

In the East we sometimes send mediocre men to the Senate. They are invariably, however, men of education and attainments. They are persons of breeding and refinement. They have a regard for decency.

Magnus marks the crest of the wave of hysteria that carried such men as Shipstead, of Minnesota, and Brookhart, of Iowa, into the United States Senate. The wave will subside and those States that, carried away by a momentary madness, have elected these men, will doubtless be heartily ashamed of themselves. For the time being they are as impervious to argument as would be a lot of raving lunatics.

The situation is not particularly dangerous. The East and the South and some of the Western States have sufficient serious minded men to keep the boat from rocking too violently. Moreover, the United States Senate is not a much bigger proposition than some of these demagogues realize. There is no place where a man's measure is more quickly taken. Like water, these rambunctious Near-Reds find their level with remarkable facility.

Magnus will not look half so big to himself in the Senate Chamber as he did in the wilds of Minnesota. His bellowing, if he assumes to bellow at all, will take on a different note. The soft pedal will be used on his vocal organs. Toughened though he may be, he will learn to respect the gavel. He will realize that the United States is not such a small proposition as he thought.

While it may be impossible to teach him manners, he will learn the meaning of law and order. He will learn that even Magnus Johnson must submit to legislative discipline. It will not be surprising if during the first few months he will have some of his rough edges worn off and polished down. Western tornadoes may be all right in Minnesota but they don't fit into the atmosphere of Washington.

LaFollette himself has never been a dangerous man. His measure was taken early in the game and he was made to sit down where he belonged. Yet he is a man of parts. Alongside of Magnus he is a giant. He is skilled in debate and knows all the tricks of the trade and all the pitfalls of his profession. He can associate with men of education and refinement without making a spectacle of himself.

Yet he has never been dangerous. His demagoguery is of the transparent kind. It gets him nowhere.

How much less dangerous will such a man as Magnus be! Can any one neglect. At the first sign of backache, headache, dizziness or urinary disorders, you should give the weakened kidneys prompt attention. Eat little meat, take things easier and use a reliable kidney tonic. There's no other kidney medicine so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills. Bellefonte people rely on them. Here's one of the many statements from Bellefonte people.

Mrs. Boyd Vonado, E. Bishop St., says: "Some time ago my kidneys were in a weak condition. I could hardly rest at night and during the day when I was on my feet doing my house work my back gave out and ached so I often had to stop and rest. I frequently had dizzy nervous headaches and my kidneys acted too often. I used Doan's Kidney Pills purchased at the Mott Drug Co., and they just suited my case. They rid me of the backaches, headaches and dizziness. My kidneys were regulated and I felt fine."
