As people are known and judged by their manners and the way they conduct themselves when in the company of others, it should always be born in mind, therefore, that politeness ought to begin at home. The story is told of a young wife who was unfortunate enough to have a crank for a husband; one of those who do not consider it obligatory to treat wives with respect, tenderness of deference. He was "a good provider," as it is called, but he thought his duty stopped there. Before marriage he was devoted to himself, to the fair creature who gave him her heart and hand, but after the honeymoon trip—in fact, before it was ended—his true nature asserted itself and he treated her as though she were of the smallest consequence. She bore all this with patience, but at last her spirit rose, and she determined to assert herself. One night as he was putting on his coat preparatory to spending a few hours at the club, she said, "John, they say that when you are away from home you are one of the pleasantest and most delightful men in the world." He said nothing, but looked at her strangely as he opened the hall door to go out. He returned from the club at an early hour, which was very unusual with him, and the following day his demeanor toward his wife was changed, and, for the better. His manner was affected, he was never petulant, he deferred in everything pertaining to domestic and household affairs, and, as she afterwards expressed it to her most intimate friend, "A better husband than John was never born."

Acid Phosphate Proves Best Wheat Fertilizer.

That acid phosphate should be the main fertilizer used for wheat in Pennsylvania is the conclusion reached by crop specialists at The Pennsylvania State College as a result of experiments and farm tests.

Wheat growers of the State are finding that on fertile soils or manured fields, applications of from 200 to 300 pounds give excellent results. When financial conditions forbid the use of more than 200 pounds of commercial fertilizer per acre, the best results have been obtained with the phosphate alone.

"On soils of medium to low fertility where no manure is used, we are finding that mixed fertilizers, either factory or home-mixed, are giving the best yields of wheat," says F. D. Gardner, head of the agronomy department at State College. "From 300 to 400 pounds of 2-12-2 or 2-12-4 has been the best application judging by results."

Wheat Fed to Poultry Brings Profitable Price.

At least one hundred farmers of Pennsylvania have found a means of disposing of wheat at the profitable price of $1.70 per bushel. It is by feeding wheat to the farm flock. Figures obtained by the poultry specialists of The Pennsylvania State College from more than 100 poultry men show that wheat brought $1.70 per bushel, corn $1.60 and oats 80 cents when fed to poultry and marketed in the form of eggs.

On the average these farm hens produced 144 eggs apiece per year which were sold for an average price of 35 cents a dozen. Labor, taxes, insurance, repairs, interest and all other expenses were deducted before the returns on the grain were figured.

The ration used on farms was one of the three suggested by the poultry extension specialists at State College. The scratch was made up of 250 pounds of cracked corn, 150 pounds of wheat, and 100 pounds of oats. For a mash, 100 pounds of meat scrap, 200 pounds of wheat, and 100 pounds of corn were ground together.
