the general concensus of opinion leaning toward the latter.

The answers depend upon what one means by the expression "President of the United States." If one and the same person can be two Presidents, Calvin Coolidge is the thirtieth; but if by the President of the United States is meant one who has filled the office each person so honored being office, each person so honored being counted but once, President Coolidge is the twenty-ninth Chief Magistrate.

If one writes the names of the Presidents, including Coolidge, on separate cards and counts them, there will be twenty-nine. If the list is arranged alphabetically and counted, twenty-nine names will be found. That ought to settle the question un-less by "President of the United States" something out of the ordinary is meant.

Washington was the first President; Jackson was the seventh; Tyler was the tenth; Lincoln, the sixteenth; Garfield, the twentieth; Benjamin Harrifield, the twentieth; Benjamin Harrison, the twenty-third. Up to the end of the administration of the second Harrison there had never been any confusion as to how many Presidents had ruled the country. Harrison was followed by Cleveland who already had served a term in the White House. There has been a disposition on the part of the newspapers ever since, to treat him as though he were twins and to count him as two Presidents. and to count him as two Presidents, when he really was but one, unless one gives the word "President, a strained and unnatural meaning. If we count Presidents the country

Highway Men Ordered to Protect All

Trees. Division and district engineers in the employ of the Department of Highways have been instructed by the department heads that they must be zealous in protecting trees on the right of way during construction. A letter sent to these employees says:

"You will appreciate that it is of the utmost importance that no trees shall be cut down in connection with highway improvements unless it is absolutely necessary. Plan your work in such a manner as to take full ad-vantage of shade trees. In working up your construction plans where shade trees of considerable growth can be saved without interfering with proper alignments and with due regard to proper construction, this must be done. There is no excuse whatever for any trees being unnecessarily destroyd or injured during the progress of the work."

Clothing Prices Higher.

Investigations made by the Department of Labor show that the present prices of clothing are about 75 per cent. above those prevailing in 1913. The exepnditure of the average family for clothing in 1923 it is stated, will be about 2 per cent. more than it was in 1922. There was a considerable increase in 1922 over 1921.

There were advances in the prices of woolens and worsteds for men's and women's clothing last spring and additional increases are to be made in these fabrics for next autumn and next spring. The high "protection" voted to the Wool trust by the last Republican Congress is being gradually but surely added to the cost of clothing.

Embargo on Fruit Imports Imposed.

A general embargo on the importation of fruits and vegetables into the United States, except from Canada, has been announced by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, to become effective November 4.

The embargo was imposed to prevent the importation into this country of fruit and melon flies, which have been reported to the department as ravaging fruit-producing countries of Europe, Asia, Africa, Mexico, Central and South America.
