The power and influence of a well-regulated home are underestimated, and nowhere is woman such an absolute ruler as in her own household. The table is a very important factor in the sum total of its various departments; and happy is the woman who has tact, thrift and good sense enough to understand and act up to the merits that lie in this important factor.

Everybody knows that plenty of well-cooked nutritious food taken into the system at regular intervals is the greatest conservator of health and strength. There should be no indifference in regard to this matter. A sound head and sound heart have threefold power and usefulness when dwelling in a sound body, and the housewife holds in her keeping (more than she is apt to think) these conditions for her household. Queen of her household, let the housekeeper, whatever her station, not under value her high position, but think and work to make better and broader its influence. Don't forget, with neatness and order left out, cheerfulness and the sweet home feeling are apt to go out too.
