MUCH LIKE ORDINARY BOY

English Lord as a Youth Succumber to the Temptations of a Strawberry Patch.

The best of berries figures as a triumphant tempter in the biographies of statesmen. Years ago at Eton there was a spacious garden near the school, celebrated for the size and flavor of its strawberries, and the proprietor made so many complaints of loss that Mr. Austen Leigh was deputed by the head master to catch the offenders. He kept watch, and swooped down upon one offender as he emerged from the garden. There was a tussle in a ditch, then the boy broke away, crawled to the middle of the road, sat down, and solemnly addressed Mr.

Leigh as "You beast!" The result was the appearance before the head master a few hours later of Lord Randolph Churchill. One cannot imagine such an escapade in the youth of Mr. Gladstone, but there is a note of Lord Morley's at Biarritz in 1891: "Mr. G. did not appear at table today, suffering from a surfeit of wild strawberries the day before." -Manchester Guardian.

Rare Dollars.

Even if you are not a coin collector you may be interested in knowing about one of the rarest coins in existence, the American dollar of the mintage of 1804.

There are not more than four or five of these coins in America at the present time, although 80,000 were minted and circulated. The entire output was sent over to the pay-master of the fleet of three United States men-of-war then lying off Tripoli. The sailors who received them took them ashore and traded them to the natives, who prized them far above their real value. There were very few silver coins in circulation in Africa at that time and the Bedouins, who eventually got hold of most of these dollars, used them as a basis for silver jewelry. A good many years later one was found attached to the armlet of a chief of the Ghadames tribe, in the Sahara. It had descended from father to son, and was bought by the Banks Brothers, of Boston, who paid $2,000 for it.

PORPOISES LIKE TO PLAY

Huge Animals of the Sea Grunt Like a Hog-Is Harbinger of the Herring and Mackerel.

If, toward the end of the summer, you see a commotion in the sea off the harbor mouth, you can safely guess that a school of porpoises is about, and that there are shoals of herring or mackerel on the move.

As soon as the water becomes warm in the long summer days, the porpoise comes down from the cold seas for food-and play. Frequently there are as many as a hundred porpoises in a school.

The porpoise's body is bloated, just like that of a pig, and when he grunts the likeness is complete. His underpart is dazzlingly white, his back a greenish black in color. Often he attains a length of five feet. On his back is one great triangular fin, and it is this fin that enables him to go through his "stunts" at sea.

He does not swim-he rolls. It is an ungainly motion, but one that is absorbing to watch. He rolls over and over, throwing up a spray and grunting in a curious manner. He never seems to get in the way of his fellows, no matter how large the school. The most entrancing part of the spectacle is when the porpoise decides to do some acrobatics. He hurls himself from the water, rises some eight or ten feet, his fat body curved and glistening, and then drops with a terrific splash. All the time he is breathing hard, so that a school of these creatures makes a considerable noise. Herring and mackerel are his prey. Season after season he hunts them down and eats them wholesale. Small wonder he is not a favorite with fish-

But he is a harbinger of the herring shoals, and for that reason his coming is eagerly awaited. Only when herring are about does the porpoise become bold. He is a useful creature, too. His big body holds a considerable quantity of good oil, while from his skin porpoise leather is made. -London Tit-Bits.

COWBOYS MILK WILD COWS

New Form of Amusement as Staged in Washington Calls Forth Protest.

Our special representative in the state of Washington, who has done so much to create humane sentiment against the cruelties associated with the rodeos and wild west shows of Washington, sends us the rules of a new form of cruelty as they appear upon the printed program, known as the "Wild cow milking contest." Five wild, but fresh milch cows are to be used. The cow has thirty feet start. Two mounted men to each cow are waiting in line to give chase.

Here are three of the rules for this The catcher will stop the cow but not "bust" her. If you do bust her you are out. His partner will dismount, go down the line, catching the cow by the horns, twisting her head back and taking the rope off from the cow or roper must release his rope from horn or saddle.

The rider who roped her will now dismount and proceed to milk this wild cow until he has half filled one-half pint cream bottle furnished by the committee.

Some of the finest people in America live in the state of Washington. May the day soon come when their influence will be strong enough to stop these barbarous exhibits of the rough and cruel handling of animals to furnish amusement to people capable of finding pleasure in such primitive forms of so-called sport .- Our Dumb Animals.

Store Water in Bamboo Pipes. i took notes while we were at Epa of a rather curious method of drawing water from the communal spring, half a mile from the village, says H. C. Pratt. Twice a day the women went down in chattering groups to the spring, carrying bamboo pipes twelve feet long. These pipes are made by forcing out the pith at the joints, and hold shout the graduate of the spring of the sp hold about five gallons apiece. When full, the drinking end was plugged with leaves, the pipe being stood in a shady spot near its owner's house and used when needed. Incidentally, drinking from these weird receptacles was a rather hazardous business, care being necessary lest a too copious supply should gush out when the pipe was held to the mouth.-Wide World Magazine.

First Millionaire in the United States The first United States millionaire was Stephen Girard, a French sailor who settled in Philadelphia in 1772 as a wine merchant on a small scale, and henceforth was bound up with the destiny of the Quaker City. He built fleets of merchant vessels, created whole residential districts, and when the Bank of the United States threatened to stop payment set up his own bank and became the leading banker of the country. On Girard's death in 1832 his estate amounted to ten million dollars—the largest known up to then in the United States. He was a bachelor, and left the whole of his fortune, with the exception of a few No triffing legacies, for charitable pur-

Newspaper Best Medium.

At a recent meeting of advertising and publicity men in Atlantic City interesting comment was made on the line of distinction between publicity and advertising material and paid newspaper space was advocated the most valuable medium for propoganda articles. It was urged that such paid space should be liberally used.

"There is no need for making the question of what is news and what is advertising a mysterious one," La-bert St. Clair, of New York, adver-tising director of the American Electric Railway Association, declared. "Every good advertising and publicity man knows the difference. When he contemplates putting out a story he should place himself in the position of the iteration." of the city editor and the advertising man. If the story has news merit, it should be given out as news, if it is advertising, it should be made up as an advertisement and placed in paid space.

The amount of free advertising which even country newspapers are called upon to give is enormous. Every mail brings so-called news stories which are as a matter of fact, simply advertising matter and should be charged for as such.

ASKS HUNTERS TO KILL CATS. In a letter sent out to sportsmen,

Seth E. Gordon, Secretary of the State Game Commission, urges hunts-men to kill all stray and deserted domestic cats. Stray cats and crows are referred to by the game secretary as vermin and he announces that in the 1922 hunting season approximately 80,000 cats were killed off by hunters. "Due to the ancient traditions con-cerning the killing of cats," says Mr. Gordon, "many persons in Pennsylva-nia unfortunately take cats they no longer desire out into the forests and release them rather than put them to death in a humane manner."

The attention of sportsmen is directed to the increase in the bounty on gray foxes from $2 to $4 and on wildcats of from $8 to $15. There are no bounties on crows or stray cats but their extermination is asked.—Ex.

Electricity Enslaved.

Steinmetz was right when he said that in days to come the electricity that Franklin lassoed will go to work harder than ever for man and spare him a lot of today's drudging labor. But that will not mean a release of energy to mere easy idleness. Leisure will mean education and the cultivation of talents which with so many of us have lain dormant or scantily utilized. The enormous inventive achievement of the ninteenth century built on the ages and the new epoch will rise on the stepping-stone of recent invention to a soaring peak whose height is not for man to determine.—Public Ledger.
