

PLANT ISLANDS IN FLORIDA

Increase in Price of Land Along the West Coast Responsible for Unique Business.

For some time island planting as an industry has been practiced in Florida, where island homes are much sought. The increase in the price of land along the west coast led to this unique business, which grew out of the opening up of the country by a railway line constructed not so long ago.

Counting upon the opportunity of sales which would arise when the promised improvements along the new line were actually accomplished, when the immense docks for the handling of hundreds of thousands of phosphate output at Boca Grande should materialize, an enterprising man planted from time to time islands at the mouth of coral creek, not far from the bridge, two miles in length, which spans Gasparilla sound.

The first experiment was with a mattress of twisted roots. This was 16 feet square with seeds of water-growing plants, palmetto and live oak scattered over the sand and broken shell utilized as top covering. Ropes were tied to the four corners, with large stones as weights. Frequent inspection revealed that sand and silt from the mainland, with the extraneous matter from the Gulf washed past the protecting piling of the long bridge, had materially aided the plan.

The success of the first island was such that seven others were soon planted. Three of these are now more than fifty feet in diameter. Connecting them is a sandbar which promises to form the group into a large and compact body of land.

TARARE IS CITY OF MUSLINS

Little French Village Which Was Lost in the Mountains Now Center of Thriving Industry.

Tarare, in east central France, is the city of muslins. It was formerly a little village lost in the Beaujolais mountains, but now it is the center of a thriving industry. For more than half a century it has conducted a world-wide trade in the finest muslins, the secret of making which originally came from India; and as a result of that trade the village has become famous. Each year, in honor of Simonet, the founder of the mills, the people celebrate the muslin festival, which calls forth the liveliest holiday spirit in all of the inhabitants.

Last year the festival lasted three days, during which the little city was truly a city of muslin. Everywhere houses, balconies and facades all but disappeared under the light and colorful decorations, which were always pretty and sometimes ingenious. Above the middle of the streets were suspended domes from which long streamers of muslin were draped in graceful curves to the second-floor windows of the houses; reseda, cream, ivory and rose predominated—gay and beautiful colors like garlands of flowers hanging from immense corals. Vehicles of all kinds were adorned with fancy muslins and gave the scene a brilliancy such as bright flowers give to the festivals of southern California.

Youthful Greed.

The little boy with the rather grubby face was crying lustily in the street when a kind old woman, who happened to be passing, stopped and asked him the cause of his grief.

"Boo-hoo! 'Cause I've lost a penny. Mother gave it to me and I can't find it anywhere."

"Ah, never mind," said the kind old soul, as she took her purse out of her pocket. "Here's another penny for you."

The child instantly stopped his howling and took the penny in his grimy hand. The old woman passed on, but she had not gone far when she heard howls louder than ever coming from the boy. Retracing her steps she asked the reason of his renewed lamentations.

"I'm crying 'cause—'cause if I hadn't lost that first penny I'd have two now."
