SAILING UP THE YANGTZE.

Wonderful Scenery and Thrilling Experiences of Dr. North and Wife, in China.

On the Upper Yangtze, Above Wanshien, November, 5, 1923.

Dear Home Folks:

Only two days from Chungking! We are all well and happy, anxious to see what our destination will be like. Our whole trip has certainly been beyond our expectations; we hope that Chungking will not be different in this respect.

Last Wednesday morning we came into Ichang. Mr. Squire, of the China Inland Mission Home in Ichang, met us on the boat, and hurried us off to breakfast. We got through customs without our usual trouble because Mr. Squire knew the ropes and had already made reservations for us on the S. S. Robert Dollar, which was due to arrive from Chungking that afternoon. When we visited the steamship office, however, we learned that Mr. Wyndham, the manager, had had a telegram from the captain to the effect that General Wu Pei Foo's soldiers had built a pontoon bridge across the river and refused to open it to allow him to pass. We must patiently wait for a favorable time.

Ichang is a city of some 70,000 people, located at the foot of the world-famous gorges. We found it very muddy because of the damp weather and the rain, but on the day following our arrival the sun began to shine again, and dried up some of the mud. In pleasant weather Ichang might be a worse town. They tell me it has improved greatly in the past few years. It is a treaty port, and is therefore open to considerable foreign influence. Along the water front are several imposing (for China) foreign structures. It has also two or three really wide streets.

On the day after our arrival Lewis Havermale, the Blanchards, Sarah and I started out on a hike, our destination being the railway station and the White Temple. We were not clearly directed, and wandered for an hour or two through the narrow, dirty streets of the city, inquiring at every turn in the road the way to the station. After a circuitous journey we reached the suburbs and were confronted with a structure that would have done credit to many an American city. The unfortunate thing about the Ichang railway station is that it has no railroad connected with it. Its history is interesting. Several years ago the officials raised large sums of money to construct a railroad from Ichang to Chungking. The Chinese from all over the region contributed funds. Then the officials began to speculate or to do something out of the way. Much of the money was lost. They did, however, build the Ichang station and some five or ten miles of road on which a train ran for a time. Then their funds gave out. The people began to make inquiry, and found that their money was gone, and no accounting could be had. I am told that this affair was the direct cause that precipitated the revolution. At present the station is used as a barracks for Northern soldiers.

From the station we climbed to the White Temple. This is so situated behind the city that from the upper stories one can get a wonderful bird's eye view of Ichang and the pyramidal hills across the river. A young novice for the priesthood—it is a Buddhist temple—escorted us into the structure and up the stairs to a place where a good view could be had. When we came down the hill, we passed through acre after acre of ancestral mounds with stone tablets telling, I suppose, of the virtues of some of the ancient worthies. Between these mounds farmers raise crops, making use of what is not sacred, and I fear, of some that is sacred. All this land, in a country that is so thickly populated as China, ought to be given over to agriculture. We passed one mound decorated with paper in honor, I judged, of the departed.

In the afternoon the men of the crowd took a sampan ride up the river for a short distance. A sailboat came along, and, as the custom is, our rowers, using their long bamboo poles, hooked on to it. We trailed merrily behind for some distance. Just as visions of a fine long ride to the entrance to the gorges was forming itself in our minds, the skipper of the sailboat hauled down his sail, and we had to resort to our oars again. We crossed to the opposite bank of the river, left the boat, and climbed one of the pyramidal hills. The writer was the only one who climbed to the top, but by doing so he secured some excellent photographs of the city and surrounding country.

That same afternoon the Robert Dollar arrived. A Japanese gunboat had appeared on the scene of the pontoon bridge above Wanshien and the Chinese meekly allowed him to pass. Our ship slipped through at the same time. Next morning we boarded the boat. We were sorry to have to leave the Pilchers behind, but the older boy had a high fever and his parents were afraid to start on a journey with him. We hope to see them again in Chungking. We were prepared to start at nine o'clock, but the steamer wasn't. It did not get under way until one. In the mean time we were visited by three young ladies on their way down from Chengtu: Miss Forbes, Miss Peebles and Miss March. Miss Forbes is a Y. W. C. A. girl, Miss Peebles is an M. E. mission girl, and Miss March is a Y. W. girl. The last named is a graduate of Syracuse, class of 1910. In this connection I might mention the fact that we also met while in Ichang Dr. and Mrs. Morse, and their daughter, of Chengtu, members of the Northern Baptist Mission. With them was traveling a Mrs. Miles, the mother of one of the missionaries in Chengtu. They are on their way home for furlough.

Shortly after we set sail we entered the Ichang gorge. The scenery is magnificent. It is not easy to put into words the effect of a swiftly flowing river flanked on either side by towering rocky steep, rough and craggy, sometimes reaching a height I should say, of two or three thousand feet. Red rock, white rock, clinging spots of green vegetation—the whole is tremendous in its effect. Then the sharp, almost right-angled, turns of the river give one repeated changes of scene, until one is almost surfeited with scenery. I understand that the scenery has been compared to that of the Royal Gorge of the Arkansas, in Colorado, but the gorges of the Yangtze seem to me to outstrip in grandeur the Royal Gorge. There is certainly much more of them. The first night we moored the ship just at the entrance to the second main division of the gorges, the Ox Liver Gorge. The portals of this gorge certainly deserve the term majestic. Lewis and I went ashore to take a picture of the Robert Dollar lying at anchor here. It was dusk, but we hope for good results.

Next morning we set sail about six—“if set sail” can be correctly applied to a steamship. The weather still continued cloudy, but I kept taking pictures just the same. Just after breakfast we came to the Yeh Tan, or Wild Rapids. The Captain gave the signal for full steam ahead, and we rushed gallantly into the foaming current ahead. All went well until we got just above the roughest, but evidently not the swiftest, water. Then we barely held our own. The whistle blew for the trackers, who live beside the rapids, to come to our assistance. Boys, young men, middle-aged men, and old men—all came down to the shore. One held out a bamboo pole to catch the tow line thrown from the boat. On the first try he missed it. On the second he caught it. Many hands grasped it and began hauling it ashore. To the end of the rope was attached the steel cable. After perhaps thirty or forty yards of it had been hauled ashore, the current caught it and ripped it out of the trackers' hands. The ship's wench hauled it aboard again. On another try the trackers managed to haul it ashore and up to the concrete post on shore for that purpose, where they fastened it. Then the wench began to wind it in, and gradually we got out of the racing current to a place where the propellers could do their work. We all breathed a sigh. It was the most exciting moment of our trip. But we relaxed too soon. When we had got into slacker water, we waited for the leader of the trackers to come out to the ship for the pay. The comprador handed the money out, but one of the men on board the sampan began to argue—for more money, I suppose. He lost his balance and went overboard. Under the sampan he sank, but luckily came up astern where he caught the rudder. As the boat floated down stream, he was hauled aboard, a sadder, but I hope, a wiser man.

—A road committee meeting will be held in the Woodmen's hall, at Millheim, Thursday afternoon, February 14th, at two o'clock, to consider the question of the Pennsylvania road. This road has been on the primary state highway list but for some reason or other has been placed on the secondary list. The meeting is to the interest of all those directly concerned to have the road restored to the primary class. A meeting was held in Millifinburg on Tuesday night and a committee appointed to work for the Union county end of the road.

MARKLE.—Abraham Franklin Markle, one of the best known men at State College and the surrounding locality, died at the Bellefonte hospital on Monday morning. He had been ailing for almost a year with internal trouble but it was not until September that he became concerned as to his condition. And consultation was had with a number of physicians none of whom gave him much hope for relief from his malady. He was brought to the hospital on January 26th for an operation but his condition had grown so grave that nothing could be done to save his life.

He was a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Halderman Markle and was born in Ferguson township on September 24th, 1855, making his age 68 years, 5 months and 11 days. His early life was spent on the Sammy Glenn farm on the Branch and like all farm boys his time was divided between going to school in the winter months and helping with the farm work in the summer. When he grew to manhood, however, he went to State College and for a number of years was employed on the college grounds. Later he embarked in the butchering business at that place. Thrifty and industrious, as well as strictly fair in all his dealings, he made a success of the business and eventually purchased a farm within close proximity to the College. Some twenty or more years ago he sold his meat market and gave his entire time to the management of his farm until his retirement about two years ago. He was a life-long member of the Presbyterian church, a member of the State College lodge of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America, and a vice president of the First National bank of State College.

As a boy we knew Abe Markle, and the impression made then by that fine, fair character that greeted everyone so cheerily and went out of his way, always, to do favors, has been added to constantly through the thirty-eight years of acquaintance. Big in stature, but bigger still in heart, he was a man who never failed to do his humble part in the Godly work of making the world a better place to live in and in so doing surely has won eternal peace and happiness.

In 1879 he married Miss Emma M. McElroy who died sixteen years ago. Surviving their union are three sons, James J., Harry J. and William F. Markle, all of State College. He also leaves two brothers and two sisters, Joseph Markle and Mrs. John Krumrine, of State College; Mrs. Alice Houtz and Charles Markle, of Elburn, Ill.

Rev. Samuel Martin had charge of the funeral services which were held at his late home at ten o'clock yesterday morning, burial being made in the Branch cemetery.

ROWLAND.—Charles Hedding Rowland, son of the late Congressman Charles H. Rowland, died at the family home in Philipsburg last Thursday night following a long illness with rheumatism and heart trouble.

He was born at Houtzdale on January 29th, 1897, hence was not quite twenty-seven years old. When six years of age the family moved to Philipsburg where he had lived ever since. He was educated at the public schools and Kiski Academy, but was compelled to abandon his studies on account of frail health. After growing to manhood he spent several years in the drug business and also assisted his father in his coal interests. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and the Philipsburg club.

Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. Anna Rowland, two brothers and two sisters, Mrs. John C. Hollenback, of Philipsburg; Mrs. J. C. Meyer, of Philadelphia; Howard H. and John Edward, at home. Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon, burial being made in the Philipsburg cemetery.

SABEL.—Steve Sabel, an Austrian, died at the Bellefonte hospital on February first as the result of injuries sustained in one of the mines of the Lehigh Valley Coal company, in Snow Shoe township, where he was employed. Sabel was badly hurt in one of the Lehigh company's mines on December 10th, one leg being badly broken. When brought to the hospital his condition was such that an operation was out of the question and the physicians also hoped to save the leg. But infection finally set in and it was one of the very few cases where blood transfusion was resorted to at the Bellefonte hospital, fellow miners from the Snow Shoe region submitting themselves as willing patients for the operation. But the sacrifice on their part availed not and Sabel died last Friday.

He was a son of Mike and Bertha Sabel and was born in Austria thirty-eight years ago. He came to this country as a young man and for a number of years had worked in Snow Shoe township. Burial was made at Clarence on Monday morning.

PEESE.—Mrs. Mary C. Peese, widow of Thomas Peese, died on Monday at her home in Benner township, following five days' illness as the result of an attack of influenza.

She was a daughter of Constance and Sophia Miller Tierney and was born on November 4th, 1855, hence was 68 years and 2 months old. The greater part of her married life was spent in Milesburg and Coleville. Her husband died about two years ago but surviving her are the following children: Mrs. William Young, Mrs. Alfred Long, Mrs. Harry Emehizer, all of Coleville; Harry, Thomas, John and Joseph, at home. Burial was made on Wednesday in the Treziyulny cemetery.

ZELLER.—William S. Zeller, who for more than half a century was closely identified with the business interests of Bellefonte, died at his home on north Allegheny street at 8:45 o'clock on Tuesday morning. During the past fourteen months he had been confined to his room, most of the time to his bed, and his death was the result of general infirmities.

He was born at Mercersburg, in Franklin county, on July 6th, 1843, hence had lived to the age of 80 years, 6 months and 29 days. While he was a boy the family moved to Lock Haven and it was there he secured his education and learned the drug business. Fifty-four years ago he came to Bellefonte and established a drug store in the old Brockerhoff building on Bishop street. A few years later he moved his store into the Brockerhoff house block, and from there to the Crider Exchange building where he did business many years and where the store is still located. He was one of the most careful and conscientious druggists in the entire State.

He was a member of St. John's Episcopal church and his greatest activity next to his business interests were devoted to his church work. He had successfully filled the offices of superintendent of the Sunday school, vestryman and accountant warden and at the time of his death was an honorary vestryman. He was one of the old school type of citizens—honest, reliable and conscientious to a remarkable degree. So closely did he apply himself to his business affairs that he found little time to devote to the social side of life but on the few occasions that he did delight he was a most congenial and delightful entertainer.

On January 28th, 1874, he married Miss E. J. McManus, of Bellefonte, who passed away two years ago. They had no children and his only survivors are one brother, John C. Zeller, of Lock Haven, a nephew and two nieces, Paul D. Deiffenbacher, of Carnegie; Mrs. E. J. Giffen, of Gibsonia, and Miss Mary H. Zeller, of Lock Haven.

Funeral services will be held at his late home on Allegheny street at 3 o'clock this (Friday) afternoon, by Rev. M. DePui Maynard, after which burial will be made in the Union cemetery.

MUSSER.—George W. Musser, a native of Centre county, died last Wednesday evening at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Evey, at Lakemont Terrace, Altoona, following an illness of some months.

He was a son of John and Susanna Musser and was born in Patton township seventy-five years ago. A good part of his life was spent in Centre county, but for a number of years past he had lived at Tipton. His survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Evey, of Lakemont Terrace, and Mrs. Clay Budd, of Tipton, as well as the following brothers and sisters: F. M. Musser, W. J. and L. H. Musser, of Bellefonte; Christ M., Mrs. J. P. Waddle, Mrs. John Rupp and Mrs. Mary Sellers, all of State College.

Funeral services were held at the Mrs. Budd home at Tipton at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon, after which the remains were taken to Tyrone for interment in the Grandview cemetery.

BLOCK.—Miss Margaret Block, who has made her home with the Clement Dale family since 1894, died quite suddenly at three o'clock on Tuesday morning as the result of a cerebral hemorrhage. She was born in Pittsburgh on March 24th, 1834, hence had attained the age of 89 years, 10 months and 11 days. No information as to her antecedents could be obtained. Since coming to Bellefonte she had been a member of the Methodist church. Private burial was made in the Union cemetery yesterday afternoon.

KELLER.—Mrs. Priscilla Keller, wife of William Keller, died at her home in Centre Hall, last Saturday morning, following a brief illness with the grip. She was 79 years, 11 months and 4 days old and was a native of Berks county. In addition to her husband she is survived by two children, Miss Tillie Keller, of Centre Hall, and Mrs. Ward Shultz, of Philadelphia. Burial was made at Centre Hall on Tuesday afternoon.

A Loss Adjusted Promptly.

On January 8th, 1924, the Samuel Markowitz house, formerly the John T. Fowler home, west of Hannah Furnace, was destroyed by fire.

It was insured in the Penn Township Mutual, of Marietta, Pa., represented by John M. Keichline, of this place, for $2500.00 and just eight days after the fire Mr. Markowitz was handed a check for the full amount of his insurance.

W. E. Hornbacher has resigned his position as superintendent of county supervision in the State Highway Department, effective this week, to succeed J. E. LeBarre as district agent for the Alpha Portland Cement company, the latter having accepted a more congenial offer with a roofing company. Mr. and Mrs. Hornbacher had for a few days considered leaving Bellefonte but now have decided to remain and will occupy an apartment in the Meese home on Logan street.

A masked card party and dance will be held at the Logan fire company building Friday evening, February 15th, by the ladies of St. John's Episcopal church. Those who do not wish to mask need not do so. Refreshments will be served. Music by the Academy orchestra. Admission, 50 cents.

Glimpses of Florida as Seen by Dr. W. S. Glenn, of State College.

West Palm Beach, Florida, January 27, 1924.

We have been here almost two weeks. Had a nice trip coming in our cars; some bad roads—none impassable and most of the roads were good. Of our three cars, none had any car trouble; the same air in our tires we started with and none added. We did not hurry; drove only during the day, stopping anywhere from 8 to 10 a. m., stopping for night from 3 to 5 p. m.

At Jacksonville we spent a half day, seeing the city and visiting the large alligator and ostrich farms; were in St. Augustine over night and next forenoon saw the city and went through the Old Fort; spent a night in Daytona, next morning got our cars and took a spin on the race course along their wonderful beach. All the way down along the Indian river for miles and miles are the most wonderful orange and grape fruit orchards, the trees as full of ripe fruit as they could hold. Seeing this wonderful fruit, one would think there would be enough there to alone supply the world.

We have the first floor of a furnished house, two squares from the lake, seven squares from the post-office and within easy reach of everything. Living expenses are fully as cheap as at home and climate all that could be desired for winter—80 degrees during the warmest period of yesterday, 67 degrees this morning about 8 a. m.; people in bathing in ocean every day, band concerts every afternoon and evening in the park under the palms. I really do not know of a prettier place anywhere than Palm Beach; have driven over around there several times since we came and it is simply beautiful and has grown wonderfully since we were here three years ago. We see people every day from the Northern States and all are most kind and hospitable.

All along the fruit belt of the Indian river, people had oranges, grape fruit and tangerines out in boxes by the road and said "Help yourselves." We stopped several places, at all we could and, upon offering to pay, they refused to accept remuneration. It has rained frequently but just a shower with lots of water falling yet, in a few minutes, nicely cleared so one can go anywhere; rains do not lower the temperature uncomfortably and no humidity as at home when it rains when warm. Roads all around here are macadam and very good. The women of our party are now out for a drive while Jim Holmes and Howard Struble have gone to the beach—half mile away—to fish.

Wish you all could see this very pretty place in winter. With my best wishes to every one. W. S. GLENN.

February sales special: Solid mahogany table lamps, two lights, double lined silk shades, at $14.75.—W. R. Brachbill.

"Scaramouche" at State College.

Stupendous in pageantry, staggering in the mighty scope of its sweeping action and tense drama, "Scaramouche," Rex Ingram's masterpiece from Rafael Sabatini's famous romance, will come with all its throbs and thrills and tears and laughter, to the Pastime Theatre, State College, Monday and Tuesday, February 11th and 12th.

In New York, where its phenomenal run at the 44th Street theatre attracted national notice, critics hailed it as the greatest demonstration of Rex Ingram's genius, and a crowning colossal achievement of motion pictures.

The picture tells the story of a young nobleman, Andre-Louis, who devotes his life to the cause of the rebels when his dearest friend is murdered by a powerful marquis and the courts refuse to take action. Andre-Louis joins a group of strolling players, taking the clown role, Scaramouche, and, under that disguise, helps stir the whirlwind of rebellion that culminates in the attack on the Tuileries. Alice Terry, Ramon Novarro and Lewis Stone have the principal roles and there are 10,000 persons in the mob scenes. In making an epic of frenzied passions and tense adventure live again on the screen, Mr. Ingram has even surpassed his own production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Popular prices will prevail at the Pastime—Adults, 50 cents, children 25 cents and tax.

A formal celebration of the installation of the new community piano was held at the community rooms in the Y. M. C. A. building last week, fifty members of the choral society being present. The piano, a Hallett, Davis & Co. make, was purchased by the choral society, of which Mrs. Russell Blair is teacher, from a part of the proceeds from the recent minstrel benefit.

The women of the Lutheran church will give an oyster supper in the basement of the church next Tuesday evening, February 12th. Price per plate, dessert included, sixty cents. The public is cordially invited to join these good people in this benefit.

A fight on Saturday night and another one on Monday night reminds Bellefonte of thirty years ago when a night without a fight was an unusual occurrence.
