Campaign Against Glaring Head Lights Being Conducted.

The State Highway motor patrol has been directed to begin a campaign against the menace of glaring automobile headlamps. Members of the patrol are now being instructed in the fundamentals of the headlight control in preparation of a rather busy season.

Driving at night on Pennsylvania roads is a hazardous task said Paul D. Wright, secretary of highways. There is something wrong with the head-lamps on the majority of automobiles. There is only one reason for this—carelessness on the part of the operator. The department of highways is going to insist upon a strict compliance with the headlight regulations. Those persons who are picked up in the campaign soon to start, and who pay a fine and costs, will have only themselves to blame. Defects in their lamps are easily remedied.

To equip a car with an approved lens is not alone sufficient—the electric bulbs must be placed in focus and the headlamps tilted down. Printed instructions for the proper adjustment of electric headlamps may be obtained from the Automobile Division Department of Highways, Harrisburg. The operation is easy and the instructions can be understood by any car owner who will give a little time to his headlamps. In addition, many garages, service stations and dealers throughout the State have installed focusing stations and are co-operating with the department.

There is no excuse for glaring headlamps. Operators of vehicles which blind approaching drivers are violating the law and will be dealt with accordingly.

The Department emphasizes its 4 points for proper headlight equipment.

- 1st. Use an approved lens.
- 2nd. Use 21 candlepower bulbs.
- 3rd. Have the electric bulb in focus.
- 4th. Have the headlamps aimed correctly.

"It is not our intention to have patrolmen focus headlamps," contended Mr. Wright, "but they will be instructed so as to be able to warn drivers and give suggestions for the correction of the evil. It will be the problem of the motorist, the dealer, and the service station to put themselves right."

question at issue being an action against the supervisors of Ferguson township to compel them to repair the road crossing the ridge from Tadpole to Gatesburg. This piece of road has been in existence for possibly a hundred years and is a short cut from Tadpole and Fairbrook across the ridge to Gatesburg and Stormstown. Little work has been done on the road for some time and the result is it is in bad condition and the supervisors have been considering entering an application to have the road vacated. But at the hearing on Tuesday they lost out and were instructed to repair the road.
