Young Braves Being Made at Camp Kanesatake.

take are enjoying to the limit the advantages of out-door life under the best of conditions and leadership. From reveille to taps the day is full of fun and man-making sport. Hikes campfires, instruction in camp craft and woodcraft all go to make up a happy day and restful night of sleep. The boys have been having two classes each morning at Camp Kanesatake. These classes are in woodcraft and campcraft and are entirely optional. The class in woodcraft is taught by director S. S. Aplin. At this class the boys are taught the right use of the hatchet, axe and knife, the making of camp fires and also the lighting of fire by use of flint and steel. They are now working on the notching and cutting of logs for the building of a log cabin. The boys in the campcraft class are taught the essentials of camp site and the equipment for personal camp use. At present they are working at clay fireplaces. They are building an incinerator, stove and a Dutch oven. These are made of clay and stone and small nail kegs are used as forms. The boys are going to bake beans and have an outdoor supper this week. There are thirty boys in this class, all taking a great interest.

The camp is run on a merit system, whereby points are awarded for satisfactory service and good camp conduct. Personal points are awarded toward the camp letter which is given at the close of camp to those who received the required number of merits, also the wigwam having the largest number of points is awarded the camp ceived the required number of merits, tribal trophy.

Inspection is one of the interesting features of the camp, both for the camper and the inspectors. Each day brings forth to light the fact that the conditions surrounding the camp are very much improved in comparison with those existing before camp. All the warriors and tribes are striving hard to retain the high standing that is set before them. The Chippewas seem to have the upper hand in inspection so far. The standing of the tribes for inspection is as follows:

4.2	Chippewas	102.4
	Bald Eagles	- 97.9
3.2	Shawnees	91.9
	Senacas	91.3
	Iroquois	90.8
2.1	Aztecs	- 85.4

Iroquois - - 90.8 Aztecs - - - 85.4 The tribes of the camp have been on the war path in athletics as well as in the rest of camp activities. Scalps have been taken in baseball, volley hell and tennis. The Beld Eagles and

On Sunday evening Rev. A. Hewitt, pastor of the Reformed church of Williamsburg, gave the boys a talk at hillside service, which is conducted on the hillside facing the west, and has been the daily inspirational service since the opening of Camp Kanesatake. Each of the three counselors have charge of two tribes. They are students of the Sunday school train-ing camp and render counsel and asing camp and render counsel and assistance to the chiefs of the tribes, there will be a great gathering of the Tri-County Sunday school workers. State speakers will address the guests and special music will be rendered. Thursday and Sunday are visitors days and many avail themselves of the opportunity to visit the boys and see the fine arrangement of the site and buildings. Many improvements are to be added each year. The camp will close Tuesday, August 26th, when the boys will reluctantly leave their

Penn State Alumni to Hold Round-up.

An informal mid-summer "roundap" of alumni and former students of The Pennsylvania State College be-gathering of this kind has been arranged at the college. For many years who are appointed by the braves from alumni in various parts of the State their own group. Leadership train- | have held picnic outings at parks in ing is one of the educational features of the camp. Sunday, August 24th, ment periods and the home-coming day in the fall have marked alumni reunions on the campus. Alumni offi-cers have called the meeting for the purpose of talking over alumni asso-ciation affairs and projects of general interest to the college.

The meetings start today, August 22 and the "round-up" will last until Sunday. A general invitation has been extended to all alumni who find it convenient to get to the college for the week-end.
